City Commissioners Consider Using New Style Street Curb

During the discussion at Mondays' Commission meeting, the question arose as to why Birmingham might not advantageously used the rolled type of gutter-curbstone employed by many residential communities.

Mayor Milton Mallender pointed out to Commission members that parts of Detroit, Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Farms use this type of curb.

"It costs, I believe, about 30 cents less per foot to construct, is adequate to hold the street, and looks good," he said. "We might do well to investigate this possibility."
