EXERCISING the body does not rest the mind! (Exercising the body does not in itself "rest" the mind. It is generally understood that systematic muscular exercise, besides hardening the muscles, improves the mental strength, by better co-ordinating power of muscles and the mind) Sense is developed, and better oxidation and increased power of the heart induced.—Encyclopedia Americana, Vol. 13, p. 501.)

When is it polite to BOAST . . . . . ?

It probably never is polite . . . but sometimes it is pardonable. The development of a large commercial printing plant in a town this size makes us believe that The Eccentric has done and is doing a pretty swell job of rendering an OUTSTANDING PRINTING SERVICE. Having committed the breach of boasting, may we go a step further and ask our Detroit Executive readers for an opportunity (some one of these days soon) to demonstrate our abilities for their organizations?
