"Night Must Fall" To Be Presented at Cranbrook

Produced and directed by David U. Farlow and Owen Jaglos, Emily Williams' "Night Must Fall" will be presented this Friday and Saturday in the Greek Theatre at Cranbrook by the Vesper Players of Detroit. William Heidel, formerly with Will-O-Way, is stage manager for the production. Kitty Little of Detroit, Dubliner daughter of the family which founded the Irish National Theatre, now known as the Abbey Players, will play the leading feminine role of Mrs. Bramson, wealthy and eccentric.

While this is her first role with the Vesper Players, Miss Little is no stranger to theatre goes in this section. She has played many parts with the Detroit Dramatic Guild and the Catholic Theatre, and at one time managed her own stock company through Michigan and Ohio.

The friendly, kindly "Dan," homicidal murderer of the play will be played by Lew Wood, formerly of the Pasadena Players. Mr. Wood has written and directed several of his own plays in Detroit.

Nurse Libbey will be played by Ruth Louise Hatit, who has triumphed with "Louisiana Purchase" and the Ballet Russe. Others in the cast are Peggy McCabe, Hallie Blake, John McCabe, Joy Wilker and Ralph Berkhausen. The play has enjoyed several successful stage tours by various companies in the country, and was at one time one of the chiller movies which thrilled fans from coast to coast.
