

Milford Fair Opened Yesterday, Continues Through Saturday

Yesterday the 63rd Milford Fair opened its gates at noon with a gala parade.

The fair will be outstanding this year with its new and special exhibits and events, it is reported.

The Oakland County P.F.A. boys will have their own exhibits and displays along with the regular fair exhibits.

This year the commercial exhibits of automobiles, trucks, trailers and farm implements are outstanding, and household appliances, building materials, including a complete log cabin will be on display.

Feature events include Children's Day today, band concerts Friday, Friday and Saturday champion horse-pulling contests along with a mammoth Cherokee Hammond Rodeo which will play each afternoon and evening. The midway features 12 major rides, shows and concessions.

The fair will continue through Saturday, August 9.

The rate of patient turnover in VA hospitals has risen to a monthly average of more than 45 per cent because of improved medical care.

Cooking Outdoors During Summer Months Can Be Fun—If You Know How

By The Old AAA Traveler

Well, my friends, here we are in the midst of the grill-and-skillet season, with the desire for woodsmoke in our nostrils and our appetites sharpened for hamburgers and grilled steaks, range-style flapjacks and strong black coffee. It's the season for roadside cookery in the country parks, or on your own backyard grill. It's the time of year when man wants to wander afield and glimpse the beauties of summertime.

This here new outdoor cookery, the finest hobby man can have, provides a delightful outlet for a fire and connect noble eatin' grub, as they'd say in the South, and more and more business and professional men are finding a supreme thrill in showing the Little Woman that he, too, can cook.

Outdoor cookery must not be particularly elaborate, but it must be good. Not only must the completed dishes be delicious, but they must be served in an attractive manier. Throw the food out before your guests and you have lost the following for your culinary art. Give as much thought to your backyard, or roadside cookery as the Little Woman gives to her Sunday dinner in the kitchen and you'll build up a following that is the envy of your less cooking-minded fellows.

Some Cooking Technique

It matters not whether you're cooking on a park stove, a portable grill which you carry in your car, or one of the elaborate so-called "Hollywood" stoves, the cooking technique is the same. But bear these things in mind:

Collect your own outdoor cooking equipment. Don't use equipment taken from the kitchen.

Get your own dishes, knives, forks and glasses for the outdoor cooking. You only have to crack up one of the wife's favored dishes, chip one of her favored glasses, and you'll find that you are, as a cook, as popular

To Stage Girl Scout Subscription Drive

A portable grill, a few simple foods, a roadside park—and you have an ideal summer luncheon. Keep your dishes simple, serve them outdoors and you will develop an appetite you've not known before.

And here are a few recipes excellent for the beginner or even for the cook who has advanced from the novice class:

Use Rock Salt

Use serving-size pieces of tender stein and one pound of rock salt. Heat rock salt in skillet until it is smoking. Lay on the steak and sear. Cook to desired stage. Lift out on plates, salt and pepper to taste and smear with a bit of butter. The salt heats in the juices and flavor of the steak, and you'll have super-steak. With this should go sliced tomatoes and boiled and buttered carrots.

Mexican Steak for four persons requires three pounds round steak, two large onions, two green peppers, three medium tomatoes, a teaspoon of butter and salt and pepper. Cut steak into four portions. Salt and pepper well. Sear in butter in large skillet.

Cut over steak the onions, peppers and tomatoes, add a tablespoonful of cold water. Cover tightly and simmer until steak is tender, probably as long as 45 minutes, adding a bit of water occasionally.
