GOOD PRINTING is like good food

Take the ingredients that go into the making of a menu and consider what the final result will be.

It's majorly the chel's experience and know-how which determines the outcome.

Take the factors that go into a piece of printing.

If you select a printer that has the counterparqualities of a good thef you can expect "dish".

Give that same job to a "madeside" type printer and you'll get a short-order result.

If your printing is flat and tasteless, consider the advantage of a chef-type printer — consider calling in an Eccentric salesman.
