

Polluted Waters May Harbor Virus of Polio

A third precaution among six simple health rules that should be observed during the polio epidemic season is to avoid swimming in polluted waters, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis cautions, through its local chapter.

While proof of direct infection by this means is lacking, the National Foundation points out that research financed by March of Dimes funds indicates that the virus causing polio is often found in sewage.

Consequently, wherever sewage may find its way into waters used for swimming, such waters should be avoided. To be sure, consult your local Health Department.

Take no chances and don't swim in waters known to be polluted.

Pedal Pusher

Pedaling from London, England, to New Zealand, Ericke J. Cooke arrives in Seattle, Wash., where he will board a ship for the last leg of his journey. He has traveled 13,000 miles through Scotland, Ireland, Canada, and the U. S. since he left London March 4.

The Pacific steamship "Columbia" was fitted with incandescent lamps as early as 1880, but the stevedores passengers weren't permitted to manipulate the new fangled lights. Encased in heavy globes, the lights were connected to wooden switches outside the cabins and were turned on and off only by the steward—wha carried the key.
