We're catching up with telephone orders in BIRMINGHAM

Although the demand for telephone service has never let up, the number of people on our waiting list is getting smaller. This is because we have received—and built into the telephone system—enough new facilities to take care of some of the folks who have been waiting.

Still more wire and cable are needed before we can take care of everyone. However, as fast as Bell System factories can manufacture and deliver them, and as fast as we can install them, we'll put the additional facilities to good use.

We'll keep at this job until everyone has the telephone and the kind of service he wants.
