By LILLIAN DIEDERICH

Rabberies in the Neighborhood
The Charles Fey home, 27821 Red River boulevard, was robbed Friday evening in the absence of the owners who were visiting the Thomas Myers of the townsite.

(Arriving home at 11 p. m., Mr. and Mrs. Fey found the rear and front doors ajar and the house ransacked from top to bottom. Dresser drawers and contents were strewn about, closets and cupboards in upheaval and pictures torn from the walls. The loot consisted of money from several pocketbooks, jewelry, a gun and typewriter. The typewriter was found by a neighbor near 11 Mile road and returned to the owner.

The thieves entered by slipping the rear porch door screen and the French door screen and shattering the glass of that door. State police were called. A neighbor reported seeing a disreputable looking 1938 Ford with two men parked in front of the house for some time and later it pulled into the drive. She did not know the cars were away.

The Murphys Have Cleared Guests
Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Surges of Cleveland spent a few days last week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hattie Murphy of Rosewood boulevard. On Saturday they attended the Michigan State game and then were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Bigsby of Ann Arbor, formerly of the townsite. Saturday Cotter Murphy, serving on the USS Sibony, arrived home from Cuba for a ten-day leave.

Modern Civilization Leaves Intact Primitive Beauty of Upper Peninsula

By the Old AAA Traveler

The Upper Peninsula of Michigan is the true Land of Hiawatha, and the Takquamegon River is the very stream that nebulous red mud is said to have used as his canoeing water.
Hiawatha may have been a legend, but certainly today it is easy to prove the reaches of that beautiful land and imagine you're back in the days when the Indians were king of all he surveyed.
The hand of modern man has not touched the Upper Peninsula comparatively little, hence we in Michigan have a magnificent playplace at our very door.
It matters very little where you're traveling in the Upper Peninsula, or what your desires may be in vacation joys, you'll find just about what you want.

Waterfalls and Lakes
The fighting lake trout out of Munising—or sunset over Lake of the Clouds—lay hours beneath the towering pines—or sun-drenched dunes along the white beaches—it's all here for you.
You'll find waterfalls polka-dotted over the Upper Peninsula—and lakes—and winding woodland trails into sylvan glades in describable in their peaceful beauty. It's vacation land of a calibre found nowhere else in this section of the country.
Many areas might be called veritable fairyland of Christmas trees! The picturesque color that is added by Indians in their native habitat—colorful wooden and red-shirted guides who might have stepped from a best-seller—of the great spread of country, islands and bays and bits of country unchanged from the days of the earliest white man—the heart's desire of the vacationist!

Favored Vacation Area
That, my friends, is Michigan's magnificent Upper Peninsula! From Sault Ste Marie and Les Cheneaux on the east to Ironwood on the west, and from Menominee on the south to Copper Harbor on the north, a spreading panorama of scenic splendor and red-healing calm that beckons the nature lover to relaxation and play! Little wonder that Michigan's Upper Peninsula has become one of America's favored vacation areas, drawing its visitors from all of these United States and even from Canada, a playplace in its own right.
You'll get your first real thrill when you cross the Straits of Mackinac from Mackinac City to St. Ignace, practically a sea voyage in its own right, because you have many miles of blue water between the two points of land.
Historic Mackinac Island, from either Mackinac City or St. Ignace you'll jump over to Mackinac Island for a look-see at that historic place.
Mackinac Island is truly a Landmark of American Civilization. For it was on Mackinac Island that Michigan's early white man set up his home—and it was on Mackinac Island that John Jacob Astor started his first trading post, a business destined to rocket him to fame and fortune.
You will stand on the very porch where once gaily garbed voyageurs and feather-hoed Indians did business with this stout-hearted trader.

Ancient Fort Mackinac has been rebuilt and stands today just as it stood when the echoing thunder of a century told of freedom being purchased at the cost of blood.
You will see Nicolet's Landing, where the explorer Jean Nicolet himself stepped ashore at the first white man to see the island of Michilimackinac. He will see caves and cliffs echoing Indian loves and tragedies.
Home of Manitow
Ah yes, Mackinac Island is an enthralling place, from Sugar Loaf Rock, legendary home of Manitow, to the Old Biddle home, birthplace of the first white child born in Michigan, and from the statue of Pere Marquette to the old dungeons where the British housed prisoners of war.

There is a great story in Jean Nicolet himself, for he had been commissioned to start westward from Quebec to find "Cathay and the coast of Asia." When he reached the famed harbor of Mackinac he robed himself in the gorgeous vestments of a Chinese mandarin—and stepped ashore to meet a group of half-naked Indians! It is related that Nicolet held in each hand a huge "horse pistol" and that when he fired those two weapons the Indians dubbed him "man with thunder in each hand."

Find Greatest Thrills
Then you start your exploration of the great spread of country. Highlights galore, so it would be very, very smart to see it in what might be called a "circle tour"—possibly a side trip over to Isle Royale—seven a quick jump over into Wisconsin—and then home through the great beauty that belongs to the lower section of this Michigan the Magnificent. But it will be in the Upper Peninsula that you will find your greatest thrills.
You'll see birds in vivid colors and squirrels and chipmunks and an occasional woodchuck will scurry from the highway ahead of the car—you will be in the nearest approach to fairyland you have ever encountered!
You will find the natives of the Upper Peninsula glad to have you with them and they will do everything possible to make your visit a pleasant one. They are by nature kindly and hospitable and they would have you love their country as they love it.

Land of Memories
The great Upper Peninsula of Michigan is one of America's top-hole vacation places and offers the ideal objective for the man or woman seeking peace and beauty during lazy, restful days.
When you have finally circled this land of enchantment and are back home you will have memories which you can never lose and which, through the years, you will sort of pull out before the winter grays and parade in all of their glories—memories of the Land of Hiawatha.

A restaurant chain in New York says many of its customers have such taking ways. More than a quarter of a million pieces of silverware were taken last year. The cost to the company was $35-000. Wholesale, that is.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

"It's Living That Counts"

I stole the title of this column from a magazine article that said a glass of mellow beer with friends... the companionship of man and wife, untroubled by distractions of the city... the mutual tolerance of one another's tastes—is choosing a friend, or a glass of beer, or a candidate for Governor.
Mind, I'm all for material improvements. But from where I sit, the real goodness of our country life is that spirit of tolerance, moderation, and good fellowship which our own hands at a worthwhile job.
And country pleasures are simple: good talk at day's end, and
