Dotted nylon Summer wedding dress with bustle back and leg-of-mutton sleeves.

Every bride is a picture. But this Spring and Summer, New York's designers of wedding dresses have all put the bride-to-be in an old-fashioned frame. It's ruffles and flounces and bustles once more—dresses with all the quaint charm of the petticoats back in fashion today.

An example of the picture type of dress is one New York designer presents it for the new season is the dotted nylon shown above. Angelically white and sheer, it is trimmed with double fluted ruffles curving up back to a bustle bow. The waistline is sweetly-sung and the sleeves truly leg-of-mutton. Naturally, a bride-to-be will think of satin. But particularly if she's to be married in June or later, she'll want to imagine herself in organza or eyelot embroidery, in dotted Swiss or batiste. Among the choices for a summer ceremony is a dream of a Southern belle dress of white eyelet batiste, its skirt just one deep gathered ruffle after another, extended in a train, and the high-necked bodice designed with an off-shoulder ruffle below a deep, rounded yoke.
