Only 8 More Days to Shop?
Why, This Wanderer Still Has Plenty of Time Left—

By This Wanderer
So, only eight more shopping days until Christmas and you think you have plenty of time to get everything purchased, wrapped and those "just remembered" gifts mailed off, do you? Often such an attitude leads to something like this. . . .
Hmmm, where did I put that Christmas list? It's not in my purse. Hope I didn't leave it at home—that would be sweet business since it took me half an hour to find this parking space. Dear it.
Well, maybe it'll come back to me.
Whoops, sorry lady, didn't mean to step on your foot. Trying to get into this store, too? Kind of crowded, isn't it? Oh, well, we'll take long to get inside the place.
Sorry, mam, but that's my ribyon's jabbing. Perfectly all right. There now.
Clumsy Met!
Golly, hot in here—better put these mitts in my purse—ohhhhh, noooo! Pardon me, but I just spilled everything out of my purse. Clumsy of me. Ugh, sorry, didn't mean to get my hand under your foot. I shouldn't watch where I'm going! Look who's talking. There, at least I've got

Parents Are Urged to Be Certain That Santa Claus' Sack Holds Safety

Only a few parents will select the proper playthings for their children this Christmas. Most will buy toys that please themselves rather than the children.
This statement comes from several engineers and most safety councils, who add that too few parents will keep safety in mind when they choose toys because they fail to realize the hundreds of ways children get hurt.
Here are the hazards to avoid in choosing toys for various ages: The Hand to Mouth Age (up to 2 years)—Avoid small toys which can be placed in mouth . . . flammable objects . . . toys with small wheels or knobs that can be pulled off . . . poisonous paint on any object . . . stuffed animals with glass or button eyes (most of them will come off. Either remove at once or buy animals with stitched eyes).
The Explorative Age (2 to 3 years)—Avoid anything with sharp or rough edges which will cut or scratch . . . objects with small removable parts . . . poisonous paint or crayons . . . marbles . . . beads . . . jacks . . . flammable objects.
The Let's Pretend Age (3 to 4 years)—Avoid toys too heavy for child's strength . . . sharp or cutting toys . . . cowboy suits or other costumes which are not flameproof . . . electrical toys.
The Creative Age (4 to 6 years) —Avoid shooting or target toys try for his mother and the store is so mobbed it's ridiculous even to consider finding that thing—I'll order a new one from Santa. beh, beh, beh. Yes, little boy here, you know. Certainly I don't believe it—let's go outside, sorry, much too hot in here, 'C'mon, let's try a few of these Michigan football tactics ourselves.

Let's Visit the Police What? Did you say something to me, mam? Who? Your little boy? Oh, good—I beg your pardon. I was NOT trying to kidnap your son. If you want to make an accusation I suggest we go to the police—you know I'm getting just a wee bit weary of all this. Here, here's the little devil and he's welcome to you and vice versa.
Of all the—Oh, well, Merry Christmas, lady. I know, it's just this shoving match that gets on one's nerves. Huh. Some character. I'm going home and digging up uncle Louis' brass knuckles or something. Hey, what's this, officer? A ticket? My nicks—has it been an hour already? Look, Sarge, here's a whole dollar. Keep
it. And Merry Christmas.

"Look! an Electric Blanket!"

JUST WHAT I'VE ALWAYS WANTED!"

"Right you are, Sis," says Dad. "Electric blankets give real, honest-to-Mor-pheus sleeping pleasure.
Automatic controls adjust to meet temperature changes—without disturbing your comfort."

Mother's as pleased as Punch about the practice luxury of electric blankets. "One takes the place of three old-fashioned blankets—cuts down on bedmaking, storage space and laundry bills. That's real saving!"

"These slumber-numbers are fool-proof, too," says Brother. "They're constructed like electricallyinsulated flying suits—they're built to last for years. Make mine an electric blanket next Christmas!"

Beautifully made of virgin wool, bonded with safety electric blankets are available in many pastel shades at your favorite appliance shop or any Edison office.
