

Cranbrook Shows Arts, Crafts of Dudley M. Blakely

Beginning today, the Cranbrook Institute of Science will exhibit the varied arts and crafts of Dudley M. Blakely who has headed the institute's exhibition staff since 1936, with the exception of the war years. He specializes in case design, lighting, interior architecture and new methods of preparation.

The exhibition includes architectural studies for the Flint Museum, the Detroit Historical Museum, the Marine Museum, the Cass Lake Yacht Club, miniature models of exhibits, work in silver, celluloid, wax, rubber, plaster, wood and paper. The mold he designed from which boats ranging from 10 to 30 feet in size can be fabricated, and on which he holds United States and Canadian patents, will be shown.

The design is taken from one found in nature and brought about by long association with natural history and his best building experiences in Rhode Island during the war. He made a study of the Sultan for painting and to British Guiana for tropical fish specimens and Indian artifacts. Paintings of these localities will be on view. Most of his water color, oil and pen and ink sketches outside the museum field are portraits, seascapes and landscapes.

Blakely has done some industrial designing along pattern making lines, a case for wire recorder, an electric fan cast in aluminum, boat fittings and post war designs for the Handmade Association. Last winter he made a silver boat which was cast in a solid block of plastic as a permanent trophy for the Narragansett Chapter of the Dingy Racing Association. Other silver pieces he designed and executed are jewelry and flatware. He did cast in bronze the Cranbrook Institute of Science seal designed by Rockwell Kent.

An honors graduate of the Worcester Art Museum School, he studied at the New York Art Students League and at the Museum and Brimingham. For 10 years he was at the American Museum of Natural History, prior to coming to Cranbrook. He has exhibited in shows at Booth Bay Harbor, Mass., Weymouth, Mass., and Brookman and Long Island, N. Y. His articles on habits group construction have been published in the Museum News and the Midwest Quarterly and he also illustrated scientific books and natural history magazines. "Orchids of Michigan" published by the Cranbrook Institute of Science contains his illustrations.

He is a member of the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts and Letters, Marine Historical Society, Detroit Historical Society, Midwest Museum Conference and for seven years was chairman of the Science Section of the American Association of Museums.

After the first of the year, Blakely will become director of exhibits for the new Boston Museum of Science. His exhibit at the Cranbrook Institute of Science will continue through December. Museum hours are from 2 to 5 o'clock daily except holidays.

Annual C of C Meeting Tonight

Announcement of the names of the three new members of the board of directors will be the primary item of interest tonight when the Chamber of Commerce membership holds its first annual meeting at the Community House at 8 p.m.

Ballots have already been sent to all members, who must return them to C of C offices by five o'clock this afternoon. Results of the election will be revealed tonight.

Mayor Milton F. Mallender will be the principal speaker of the evening. Various annual committee reports are also on the agenda.

More than 90 per cent of all automobile accidents in 1947 involved cars with no apparent mechanical defects.
