Hugh White Feted at Birthday Party

The Gay 90's enjoyed a revival in Franklin Village last Friday evening when about 100 presents came in costume to the Hugh White home on scenic Drive for a surprise birthday party in honor of Mr. White.

Old fashioned fans with flowers at their base added a touch of the years ago atmosphere. A picture of White at the age of five in a sailor suit and cap was "on display" and a doll in the same costume as well as a doll depicting White in the baby stage were also part of the decorations.

An orchestra playing music from back in the 90's helped the guests elix the evening with old-time dancing.

Simplicity: the supreme excellence

WHEN one analyzes modern design, it is found to be characterized by a new and pleasing simplicity. Gone are the useless things of yesterday with their "busyness" in trim, their frequently meaningless forms, and their all-too-often lack of that quality which makes a piece of furniture, or a lamp, or chinaware easy to live with.

Instead, the very simplicity of modern things denotes a supreme excellence—in beautiful proportion, in usefulness, and in that rather indescribable quality which makes a thing nice to have around!

Moreover, it's surprising how well carefully chosen pieces of modern will "mix" with conventional things if the home owner is trending toward modern.

You are cordially invited to see our showing of simple, supremely excellent. MODERN.
