

Lathrup Village News

By LILLIAN DIEDERICH

Before an altar banked with palms and vases of white stock and white carnations at either side, Jeanne Dorothy Lampinen and Waide Irwin Porter were united in marriage Friday evening at the First Methodist church, Lathrup Village.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a duchess white gown, styled with a fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline, long tight sleeves and bouffant skirt with train. A veiled satin tulle to which was attached a veil of illusion, formed her head-dress. Her bouquet of white bridal roses was centered with a removable white orchid.

Mrs. Ralph Sparrow of Royal Oak was her sister's matron of honor, and her gown was of Nile green tulle styled with a bustle effect. She carried yellow carnations. Janet Slambrouck of Detroit and Grace Blake of Berkeley were the bridesmaids, and their gowns were identical of yellow tulle with fitted bodices and sweeping skirts with bustles. They carried colonial bouquets of green carnations.

Clifford Porter was best man and Bob Diederich and Bob Lampinen served as ushers. Mrs. Harry Kitchen was the soloist.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. The lace covered table was centered with a four-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. At either end were vases of white carnations behind which stood candelabras of tall tapers. After a wedding trip the young couple will make their home in Berkeley.
