Marion Kirk Named Dance Director for Summer Theatre

Carl G. Wonnberger, director of the Cranbrook Summer Theatre School, has announced the appointment of Marion Nevill Kirk as director of dancing in the Cranbrook Summer Theatre. Miss Kirk lives in Birmingham. A former student at the Sturt School at Boston University and at the New England Conservatory of music, Miss Kirk has studied the dance with Jan Veen, Martha Graham, Hanna Holm and Louis Horst. She had also studied at the Humphrey-Weidman School and at the American School of Ballet.

In 1945 she was awarded a scholarship to Jacob's Pillow Festival. Miss Kirk formerly served as an instructor of the modern dance at Cornell University. She did the choreography for the Jan Veen group which performed with the Boston Symphony, headed U.S.O. performances in New England and had the lead in the Medieval Dance Play done in the Dance Theatre in Washington and danced with the Lester Horton Concert Dance Group. Miss Kirk will teach dancing and body work at Cranbrook this summer. Wonnberger announced today that all places for girls in the Theatre School have been filled. A few places for boys in the intermediate and senior divisions are still available.
