

BITS OF B'HAM

author of the letter was. When her husband came home and opened it, the mysterious letter turned out to be a credit card from a jeweler who was on a shopping trip abroad and was very cleverly using his trip as a means of advertising. We always knew advertising was effective and especially so when it's unusual. This was definitely unusual. The housewife won't forget the gesture because of the way it aroused her curiosity; the husband won't forget because someone had bothered to take his name and address across the ocean.

Although it is only a temporary arrangement, current patrons at the Carrousel Diningroom are discovering that a "floor show" accompanies their meal. They are entitled to watch George Kirtzoff, a Chicago artist, at work painting the room in a carrousel motif. The work will be featured with "black light."

Police Chief Ralph Masley is warning local residents against donations to unrecognized charities. There are many organizations, especially this time of the year, which are attempting to raise money. Many of them are honest and well organized and are prepared to show straight-forward records of where the money is used, and how. Others are based on a much different idea, and are purely for the benefit of those persons making the solicitations. "Unless you know the person or the organization, don't give," was Moxley's advice to Birmingham.

Ed Kirtzoff, secretary of the local YMCA branch, has the doubtful distinction of having voted for President three times in 1944. It wasn't his desire, but he became involved in Army-red legs, he declares. "I was stationed in Devonshire, England, in October, 1944, when I voted the first time." Ed explains, "Four days later I had been transferred to Wales where my officers asked if I had voted. I said 'yes.' But the fact hadn't been entered on my record. I was told to vote again. A week or so later I was in France and my new company officers had me vote a third time—my other two votes still hadn't been recorded. But don't worry, the election board in my Detroit precinct noticed all three ballots, but only recorded one."

In Birmingham shopped only by residents of the immediate area? A check of parking tickets issued by the local police department would indicate: "No." Since the parking meters have been operating more and more out-of-town shoppers have been given violation notices. These shoppers have come from as far away as Rochester to the north, Farmington to the south.

Ye Managing Ed has been kept pretty busy this week checking over all the questionnaires that have been returned to him so far. He wants this Wanderer to relay his thanks to all those civic-minded individuals who have responded to date. And he asks that more and more of them come in, for he doesn't mind doing a little work, at all, if it means a BETTER Birmingham.

Junior Musicales Plans Hayride

The Birmingham Junior Musical League is planning a hay-ride to Franklin Village for members and guests on Saturday, Nov. 20. Betty Beardsley, Sonya Rader, and Carol Rosenberger comprise the social committee and Ed Wilson is in charge of arrangements.
