City Asks for Paving of Alley Between Maple, Chesterfield

City commissioners have approved the preparation of detailed plans for the construction of a concrete alley from Chesterfield to Maple.

In recommending that this project be initiated, City Manager Donald C. Ebert said the present condition of the alley is very unsightly and "I am sure it will not be useable during a portion of the winter and certainly not in the spring."

Public Commends National Bank on New Facilities

According to remarks that have come to First National Bank employees from local citizens, the bank's newly-rededicated and enlarged facilities are indicative of the forward-looking business interests in the city.

Herbert H. Gardner, president of the bank, this week paused to comment on the many compliments he has received on behalf of the organization.

"It has been our purpose, in accomplishing this remodeling and enlarging, to establish facilities that would meet the general standards of business services as are expected by the people of Birmingham. I have been very happy to observe the expression of interest of the great numbers of people who have come in to view the new bank."

Greater Public Convenience He said visiting bankers have also praised the new general arrangements and particularly the dispositions made for the tellers.

"Our facilities arranged not only provide for the convenience of the public, but also make marked economies in operation," Gardner pointed out. The new addition, started last September, makes provision for a loan department on the first floor with president's office and board of directors room, with the accounting department in the basement.

"This latter accomplishment has resulted in the removal of noisy accounting machinery from the main banking floor, giving a quieter atmosphere for the customer," Gardner remarked.

Greater Lobby Space "The new safety deposit vault provides for double the number of boxes, plus other conveniences for renters not previously available."

"The constant increase in the number of new accounts, both savings and commercial, indicates public acceptance of our improved facilities and faster service," he stated.

Historic Gavel Is Presented to Local Realtors

At an evening meeting during the annual convention of the Michigan Real Estate Association, held September 15-17 in Detroit, Frederic C. Peck, president of the Birmingham Real Estate Board, received from Hobart C. Brady, president of the Michigan Association of Real Estate Boards, an historic gavel.

At this meeting the president of each local real estate board received a similar presentation. The gavel was made of walnut grown on the Mount Vernon estate of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson's estate at Monticello.

Need for Rededication President Brady went to Detroit for the purpose of making the presentation of the gavel from the National Association of Real Estate Boards to the local board as part of the Association's observance of Constitution Day.

In presenting the gavel, Brady said: "This presentation on the 161st anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, serves to remind us clearly set forth, in our rededicated course safely and successfully. Realtors are especially interested in its preservation, for the private ownership of property is one of the rights guaranteed by that great document with the preparation of which both Washington and Jefferson played so vital a part."
