Grand Traverse Section, Michigan's 'Land of Delight', Intrigues Visitors

By The Old AAA Traveler

You may sing the praises of the towering mountains and of the wave-lashed Atlantic coastline up New England way, but for unadorned beauty and a peaceful calm beyond description I give you the Grand Traverse section of Michigan.

Little wonder the Indians loved it long before the white man came in, for it's a land of blue waters the country's greatest dogs via his pen.

"La Colina" is just one facet of this many-faceted jewel which attracts hundreds of thousands of beauty-loving Americans from the 48 states. Travel in any direction from Traverse City in Michigan, you will find something new and exciting in the way of things and places.

Drying nets around Leland, in the Grand Traverse area, provides the cameraman, with picturesque touches usually associated more with New England or the Cape Cod area.

and green forests, fine fishing and a balam-perfumed air to bring the sleep of a babe; it's a paradise for the vacationist fleeing the rumble of modern traffic and the busy-burly of modern business life.

Great Panorama
I've stood high above Traverse City in "La Colina," Ford Cary's magnificent Spanish type hacienda, and marvelled at the great panorama spread out before my eyes, and when in "La Colina" I've sensed I'm in one of the "musts" of the section, for high on this hill of the section, one of the country's famous artist-photographers, has his kennels, Siberian huskies and his studio where he perpetuates

Land of Delight
And I reckon my evaluation of that great section of the state isn't anything very original—for the Indians' way back in the years before the white man came in, had named the great Peninsula Leelanau, which meant "Land of Delight."

Truly a suitable designation for that brilliant, bright landscape, scope of forests and lakes, majestic sand dunes and miles of archaic, mossy beaches and winding trails, white-winged sailing craft and leaping game fish.

Yes, my friends, when you see the Grand Traverse region you are looking at the smaller one. They called the smaller one "La Petite Traverse," or "little crossing," and the larger they called "La Grande Traverse," or "great crossing," and it is from that larger bay that the entire section of Grand Traverse country, Leelanau . . . Antrim and Benzie . . . gets its name.

Another Big Thrill
Or, putting it differently, just sort of mentally list these things you'd like for what YOU would consider the ideal vacation . . . and it's a 50-to-1 shot that you'll find every one of these things in the Grand Traverse Region.

Office lighting at the Municipal Building is inadequate and needs to be corrected, City Manager Donald C. Egbert informed city commissioners Tuesday evening.

"The acoustical problem in the building is also bad," he pointed out.

Commissioners told him to go ahead and prepare more detailed plans for revamping the present lighting system, and when the costs are figured, to report back to the commission.

Have You Met . . .
Former Detroiters, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Large and their daughter, Michele, who are residing at 209 Chestersfield? Mr. Large is with the export division of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

Michigan's "Land of Delight" invites you.

Invitational Tennis Tournery Starts Saturday

The Birmingham Tennis Club will wind up its most successful season with a four-day invitational tournament, according to J. C. Wilson, president of the Club.

Invitations have been extended to the six tennis clubs with which Birmingham Tennis Club has held matches this year. Each club will enter up to six of its members in the men's singles, three teams in the women's doubles, four women in the women's singles and two teams in the women's doubles events.

The six tennis clubs invited to participate in the tournament are the Detroit Tennis Club; Flint Tennis Club, Highland Park Tennis Club, Indian Village Tennis Club, Saginaw Tennis Club and Windsor Tennis Club.

The Birmingham club lost only one of its inter-club matches this year and that was to the Detroit tennis club.

Dates for the invitational tournament are the next two weekends, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 11 and 12, and Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 13 and 14. The finals will be Sunday, the 14th, and play will be on the courts of the Birmingham club at Kingswood school.

The tournament promises to bring together the finest array of tennis talent that has been seen

Canadian Leader

St. Laurent, Canada's minister of external affairs, recently was ejected head of the Liberal Party, succeeding Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, who held the position for 20 years. St. Laurent is expected to become prime minister on King's retirement from that post.

In this area this season since many of the outstanding players of Michigan are members of these clubs.

The tournament committee handling the invitation affair are E. L. Dinger, chairman; Harold Fenerty, referee; Leon Bramley, Mrs. Margaret Beers, and Frank Goppel.

2 Birmingham Men Honored by Oil Co.

Two Birmingham men were among the 114 throughout Michigan to receive safe driving awards this week from the Shell Oil Co., Inc.

A. E. Martin, operations assistant engineer who lives at 30477 Oak drive, held the highest safe driving record in the state with 21 years on his credit.

The first commercially-produced television show broadcast from an airplane in flight was put on by the Navy's Willow Grove, Pa., Naval Air Reserve Station in November, 1947.
