Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

The surest way in the world to hit a pedestrian is to sneak up on him, give him a blast of the horn and swerve to one side. The chances are excellent that you'll scare him out of 10 years' growth — and run him down at the same time.

The driver who knows his business follows these hints:

- (1) He stops just short of the intersection and allows the pedestrian to cross without crawling over fenders and bumpers.
  - (2) He gets off to a slow, smooth start — after the last straighter has crossed over.
  - (3) He knows that men grate madly when the wind takes their hats; that a woman will stop directly in his path in the excitement of recovering a dropped package.
  - (4) He knows the greatest danger is from adults and children who suddenly dart out between cars parked in the middle of the street.
- The good driver who wants to avoid pedestrians leaves nothing to chance — he does the thinking for them both.
