

Local Teachers Relax After Completing Wayne University Summer Session

principal of Webster school, White Lake township; Mrs. Jean Lankabury, Birmingham, a member of the Huntington Woods school staff; Mrs. Emily Waterman and Mrs. Hester Vocum, both of Birmingham and teaching in Pontiac schools; Calvin Kirtle and Louis McGuinness, instructor of the Wayne University staff.

The several Birmingham teachers who have taken advantage of the off-campus program, offered by the College of Education of Wayne University, will return to their classrooms this fall, better equipped to handle the problems which arise.

Local teachers who attended the classes, held in the Washington junior high school, Pontiac, were Mrs. Marjorie K. Kuslander, a member of the city school staff; Mrs. Emma Goodrich, who teaches at Auburn Heights; Mrs. Anne Pellissier, Pontiac; Mrs. Ruth Ann Stepp, Bloomfield Hills rural school; Mrs. Emily L. Waterman, and Mrs. Hester Vocum, both teaching in Pontiac and Mrs. Jean Lankabury, Huntington Woods.

The summer sessions were under the direction of Dean Waldo E. Lesinger of the College of Education. The instructors active in the program included Louis McGuinness, government and sociology; Robert Rothman, education, and Miller Collins, history.

need of the teachers involved.

Dean Lesinger, speaking of the work, remarked, "For several years individual superintendents have requested Wayne University to help in their in-service teacher education program. The College of Education there believes that its fundamental reason for existing is to improve the available education of all young people in southeastern Michigan."

The 1949 summer sessions were lightened by several between-classes "coke sessions" where informal discussions held forth. The attending members also enjoyed a picnic breakfast at the home of Mrs. Ethel Rowley at Seymour Lake.
