The Line Is Busy

BY DORIS E. KUS

Pardon me, but I'm about to be- come distracted. It always happens right about now and I guess most everyone experiences the same sensation. But the attention hyper- hysteria of last minute feverishness, of belaguering the post office and making sure all names on the gift list are checked off, that the hol- iday greeting cards are stamped and in the mail is, however, nothing whatever compared to the hours of agony and energy re- quired here to select a worthy Christmas tree.

Every year the comment "we'll get a small tree this year" has been heard over the Sunday breakfast table. Everyone is in mutual accord on the idea and all is calm as we set out in search of this "smaller" object. Now oddly enough, for all the talking, ever since I can remember we have always bought a terrific hunk of evergreen. Not only has it been much too tall, necessitating the removal of several feet, but it has also been absurdly fat. Beautiful, really, but in a ways, awkward.

With each Christmas season the living room is an upheaval as a result. At least one chair must be relegated into another spot in the house, tables are moved, and many a lamp has all but been hung from the ceiling for lack of other room. All because of that darned tree. But it's so very breathtaking when it's all trimmed, the lights glowing, the ornaments sparkling. All these thoughts are going through our minds as we tramp about, almost frozen but determined, gleaning over the stock.

It's the same old story. The "smaller" trees are nicely shaped but too stumpy. Others might be full, but not at all prettily formed. There is a firm debate followed by a stalemate as to whether to buy another plot. After several tours of inspection in various places, someone sighs heavily. Unbeli- evably gorgeous. Tall, terrific, tempting. And very round and fat.

So okay. Maybe it'll take up more that the allotted corner. Perhaps it it's exactly what we planned on. But remember how lovely that monstrosity was last year and the one the year be- fore—and how everyone ad- mired—Remember? It might take several hours to decorate—but—ain't it a beauty!

We take it. The only difference this year will be that we got to talking about a less impressive number earlier. We still end up squeezing past—and knocking off a few ornaments in the process—to get into the library or the hall. It might take some scheming to find a place to move the phono- graph, radio or that dreadful table. We might have to crawl on hands and knees to get to the other side of this lovely Christmas tree...but...

"Pinocchio" at the Birmingham Theatre

On Dec. 22 at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., the marionettes of Meredith Willby will again be pre- sented to the children of Birming- ham under the auspices of the A. A. W. Children's Theatre Group in the Birmingham Theatre.

The program includes "Pinoc- chio" which will be presented in six acts; scenes in "The Land of Toys" and "Inside the Monster Fish"; and "The Merry Men of the Forest."

Since the advent of television, there has been an increasing in- terest and appreciation of puppet shows. The Birmingham Theatre Puppets, under the direction of Mrs. Calvin DeMott and Mrs. Robert Von Maug, has scheduled a series of programs for the holiday sea- son. The puppets, stage, set, scenery and many of the plays are made and produced by mem- bers themselves.

On Dec. 8 the group played to the Oakland County Juvenile Home in Pontiac. The second show is scheduled for today, Dec. 15, at the Methodist Church in Berkeley at a Christmas party for the chil- dren of the St. John's Woods area.

On Dec. 17, the puppets will perform for the children of the Village Players and the last show will be held on Dec. 28 in the Baldwin Public Library for the Children's Story Hour. At the con- clusion of the two plays being offered at each of the perform- ances, a puppet Santa Claus will step forth to talk with the audi- ence and lead them in singing "Jingle Bells" to the accompani- ment of old-fashioned sleigh bells.
