It's His Story

Here's a hunting story! Dick McKay made a trip to the Beeler Boy's camp and spent the weekend hunting. Knowing that he would return the next weekend, he left his hunting equipment there when he came home.

The next weekend he and his six-year-old son headed for the north woods. Son, Randy, was armed with his trusty B-B gun. They were going along about 40 miles per hour (he says) when they turned off the main road near Mio about nine miles from the camp and saw two does coming across a plowed field. He stopped the car to watch and the deer also stopped to watch.

As they climbed out of the car to see what would happen, the two does turned and ran crossing the road about 100 yards away (he says). Father and son, equipped with the latter's trusty B-B gun stood there beside the road and watched. Then across the field comes a fine buck (he says) and down along the fence toward them (he says). It gets within range, there they stand, father and son, equipped with his trusty B-B gun.
