Watch Out For "Little" Colds

There is no such thing as a "little" cold because any cold is the first break in your natural defenses and can quickly and easily develop into a serious infection of the respiratory tract. So don't treat a "little" cold lightly. Take care of it promptly. If a cold "hangs on" or begins with chills, and fever, call your doctor. He will determine just what your "cold" is and prescribe the proper medicine and treatment. Follow his instructions to the letter—and for letter-perfect compounding, bring his prescription to us.
