

Recreation Roundup

Kite day with no wind is like a baseball game with no ball. So the recreation staff had to postpone last week's scheduled kite events until some future windy afternoon when no other special events are scheduled at Barnum. (Ross Campbell's question is still unanswered. Who did say that everyone talks about the weather but no one does anything about it?)

All the old timers undoubtedly remember the old fashioned water wings with which kids used to have so much fun. The Recreation Department has purchased a dozen of the new plastic type and experiments are being conducted as to their value for swimming instruction in Barnum pool. It was felt that this explanation was necessary to those doting parents who watch their offspring cavort in the pool. Some of them apparently really believed their little angels were actually sprouting wings in technicolor. We know better!

Strange things have been happening over the weekend. Someone broke into Barnum pool and spirited away two pairs of swim fins which all the kids enjoyed so much. Cheer up, swimmers, the thieves didn't take the diving board or the water.

The craft shop kids know that when love paper dolls with paste on them. Last Monday when the creative ones returned once more to give vent to their artistic talents they found that their paper dolls had been thoroughly decorated by the boys who will probably participate. Girls are in it also.

The new Pierce field house has been used constantly since it was opened earlier this year. Not only is it providing shelter and comfort for the younger playground children, but one wing has been turned into a huge stage. Here the sixty boys and girls participating in the children's pageant do their practicing. The other wing is being used to conduct handicraft classes which would not be held during the summer recreation program.

King Solomon had it fairly tough once in a while, according to the reports that a few of the old boys left us. However, when we stop to think of the rough deal that our outstanding superintendent of education, Norman Wolfe, has been facing this summer, we think the old king had it a little easier. Imagine the problem of holding to a work schedule of preparing Barnum High school for next fall when the painters want to paint, the cleaners want to clean and the drama group wants to build scenery. The Recreation Board pays this week's tribute to the abovementioned Norman Wolfe.

"The Dancing Queen" to be Presented Monday Evening

By Alice Price

Mrs. Irene Mortensen will present the 65 children who have been rehearsing under her direction in "The Dancing Queen" Monday evening, July 28. The performance will be given in the Baldwin high school auditorium at 6:15. Tickets are available at Campbell's Village Store, Shain's, Baldwin high school, and will be sold at the door prior to the show.

The cast, youngsters from three-and-a-half to 12 years, have been practicing enthusiastically for the past five weeks. They have worked out several difficult routines, which they feel sure will please the members of the audience.

David Murphy, the master of ceremonies, attended the Cranbrook summer theatre and was cast in the lead for several plays in the East before coming to Birmingham to live. The queen, Pauls Paris, at 11 is already a dancing veteran, and plans to make the stage her career.

The play is the story of Queen Ermalinda who devoted her life to the care of any children who loved music and dancing. Her husband died in a battle, and she sent out these children, and returning with them to the palace of the queen, where singing and dancing became their lives.

The ballet dancers who will appear include Carol Bishop, Elaine Bishop, Lynn Harrison, Penny Hewlett, Ann McCartney, Janet Collins, Patsy Smith, Sharon Fisher, Cathy Crockett, Anne Harrison, Marty Harrison, Eileen Salvette and Madeline Harrison.

Palate Guards

Guards are maintained about the palace, that the Queen and her subjects may not be interrupted. Ward and Margery Dodd, cast as the guards, tap dance madly about the palace, wildly waving double-barrelled shotguns, and uttering threats to shoot anyone who molests their Queen. They are assisted by a crew of guards who circle the palace, carrying batons. The crew, headed by Lynn Harrison, includes Wendy Greenwald, Barbara Burge, Sheila Nevhart, Eileen Salvette and Rebecca Wagner.

Bill Cartwright, Bonnie Cartwright, Carol Weimer, Penny Hewlett, Gail Muldoon and Jean Tiedeman, patrol the surrounding country to protect the Queen and her dancers from raids by the villagers who do not fully understand, nor appreciate their activities.

Tom Hizar, as Jasper the Coachman, drives the magic coach, drawn by six spirited white horses whenever the Queen is summoned to another search for additional talent. As she gathers more and more talent about her, the idea changes some excellent Chinese dancers who are introduced by the porters. Frankie Green is the lead selected to dance with the girls and watch over them. These dancers are Penny Hewlett, Patsy Hewlett, Carol Bishop, Elaine Bishop, Linda Housman, Jill Greenwald, Wendy Greenwald, Sandra Nevhart, Patsy Parmit, Susan Housman, Patricia Collins, Linda Kerley, Diane Jolderson and Judy Brindley.

Far out in the west, Queen Ermalinda finds two little Indian brothers, Jimmy and Michael, who are chosen to go to the Thunderbird dance during the festival. In keeping with her western bias, the Queen returns with five little Mexican girls, who will present the Hot Dance.

From Hawaii come seven pretty little dancers, complete with grass skirts and leis. John Fox, Judy Sterling, Sheila Nevhart, Lynn Mayhew, Janet Miller and Judy Bergman are the ones who will dance in the real Hawaiian manner.

The dancers will be accompanied by Shirley Rostow, Alice Berndt, David Capito and members of the summer band.

Christmas comes but once a year in most places. But the night of July 12 came again to the Community House. There were no Christmas trees. There were no trees, streamers, decorations, the chandeliers. There was no Christmas wreath at the window nor any noise or light coming from the fireplace. But... There was a Santa Claus. And gifts.
