June is Dairy Month

30 IMPORTANT DAYS IN MICHIGAN

June has been proclaimed Dairy Month in Michigan by Governor Williams—not as a good-will gesture to dairy farmers but because dairying is generally considered the state's most essential industry.

Milk provides Michigan farmers their largest cash income—more than 218 million dollars last year.

The million dairy cows on Michigan farms provide in excess of 2 billion 650 million quarts of milk a year.

These dairy herds represent an investment of 275 million dollars just in livestock alone.

But aside from these impressive figures, Milk has won a place in the "Hall of Fame" as the most essential item of food in the American diet—it is indispensable to the Nation's welfare.

More than 15,000 members of this Cooperative are working unitedly to provide their markets with the finest milk and dairy products. This month they are setting aside a portion of their incomes to help finance both state and national programs of research and experimentation. These projects are carried on to improve the quality of their herds and products and find new uses for milk. All of which contributes to better health and a greater enjoyment of life by all of our people.
