Escorted to the flower banded altar by her father, the bride's fingertip veil was held by a satin bonnet. A circular train swept from the full skirt and seed pearls were featured on the sweetheart shaped neckline of her white satin dress. Pearls also edged the gown's peplum and the sleeves were traditionally pointed over the hands.

In pale green pique, Mrs. Carl T. Blauman, Jr., of Birmingham was her sister's matron of honor. The dress was styled with a bolero jacket and a bustle back. She wore a large picture hat and streamers which matched her dress and carried a spray of yellow daisies.

Miss Nancy Dodds and Miss Frances Newell, of Birmingham, and Mrs. Floyd Ingalls, a sister of the bridegroom of Denver, Col., as bridesmaids were also dressed in pale green pique fashioned in identical lines after the matron of honor's gown. Their flowers were white daisies in a spray arrangement. Similarly dressed and with white daisies in her arms was Miss Nancy McCombe, a junior bridesmaid.

Richard Dick was his brother's best man and ushering the guests to their seats were Carl T. Blauman, Jr., of Birmingham; Stewart Gooding of Denver; James Fink of Colorado Springs; John Deal of Craig, Col., and Gordon Broth of Chicago.

Mrs. Fox chose for the ceremony and reception which was held in the Fox residence following the rites, a pale beige crepe ensemble with a baku hat that was covered with brown lace and a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

ELECTRIC WATER HEATERS USE ALL THE HEAT
Feel the wall of your electric water heater. Sure, it's as cool as a cucumber. Unlike other types, all the heat generated in an electric water heater goes into heating the water—there is no wasted heat to be carried off up a flue or chimney. And the heavy insulation around the tank keeps all the heat inside where it cannot affect the temperature of kitchen or laundry.
