Salesmanship and Children

New ideas and help on the problem of handling children will be given members of the Adams school PTA when Daniel L. Beck speaks on "Using Salesmanship in Handling Children" on Tuesday, March 15, at 8:00 p.m. in the Adams school gymnasium.

Beck is owner of the Executive Selection and Training Institute of Detroit, an organization which specializes in sales training and aptitude testing. Prior to this, he was director of advertising, merchandising and sales promotion with the Dodge division of the Chrysler Corporation. During his 27 years' sales experience he has personally trained or supervised the training of thousands of successful salesmen.

As a father himself, Beck knows that the most successful parents are those who have learned to get true pleasure out of rearing and guiding children through applying basic principles of salesmanship. He will tell the PTA gathering how to do it and will demonstrate these principles with two talking pictures showing every day life instances.

Though tartar sauce is considered an ideal accompaniment for fish, it is also delicious with veal. Try it the next time you serve breaded veal chops or a fine veal roast.

And for the ideal foundation, choose the Beautyrest box spring, with 72 hand-tied, double-cone coils deeply imbedded in cotton felt. Mattress or box spring, full or twin size.
