

Their 37th Anniversary

Saturday is the thirty-seventh anniversary of the founding of Girl Scouting in the United States...

Juliette Gordon Low, who founded the Girl Scouts, could not foresee the course of history...

Why? Because Girl Scouting recognizes and fulfills the basic needs of young people for companionship and fun...

Faith in the future is never greater than it is in childhood. Girl Scouting translates this faith into action...

Leadership in the Girl Scouts is voluntary. The thousands of girls whose names are on waiting lists cannot be admitted until more women offer their services as leaders...

As they celebrate their organization's thirty-seventh birthday Birmingham's "girls in green" ask you to join them and share the adventure...

The trouble with too many adults is that they think their school days have ended.

The progress of civilization is handicapped by the little men who hold firmly to positions beyond their capacity.
