

There is little of real security within the framework of the laws of man; for such laws are subject to the change in mankind's whims and caprices, his selfishness and deceit. God's laws alone provide lasting protection against the evils of earth.

Restrictions on the number of men who may enlist in the Air Force have been virtually eliminated, according to an announcement made today by Sgt. Lynn D. Rexford, in charge of the local Army and Air Force Recruiting Office at Pontiac.

"For the past several months, the Air Force has had a ceiling on the number who might enlist. Effective immediately, these ceilings are no longer in effect and any young man who can meet the high standards for enlistment in the Air Force will be enlisted," Sgt. Rexford said.

Lt. Col. L. S. Smith, commanding officer for the Air Force Reserve in Oakland County, announced today that an Air Force Reserve unit has been formed in Pontiac and is in need of former service men of any branch or service.

Personal joining this unit will protect their rank in case of an emergency and will accrue credits toward retirement, Col. Smith said.

Meetings are held on the 1st and 3rd Thursday of every month. Interested young men may contact the Pontiac Recruiting Station.

Easy Way to Demonstrate Safety Problems

Sgt. Henry Timm, children's traffic safety director for the Birmingham police department, shows how easy it is to demonstrate safety problems and give the correct answers by using a new "magnetic" board.

The Birmingham police department is the first organization in the State of Michigan to adopt a new type of visual education in a traffic safety campaign. Working through school children, Sgt. Henry Timm, who is in charge of the program, has found the system most effective.

Nearly communities have watched it with great interest, and there are plans afoot in several of them to start similar programs.

The State of California recently passed a law requiring driver training in all high schools. More than 1,500 of this special visual aid have been ordered for these California classes.

This Video-Graph board, as it is called, and the traffic safety kit are being used by Judge John D. Watts of the Detroit Recorder's Court traffic and ordinance division in Detroit, both in the court and in the traffic forum conducted over WJW-TV.

The mechanics of the Video-Graph and the driver safety kits are very simple.

Create Static Reaction
 A chemically treated black cotton material is stretched and glued to a firm surface. The visual symbols of the driver safety kit are backed with a rayon flocking, which has very short fibers and feels like fine suede.

These fibers create an electrostatic reaction with the chemically treated fabric, as well as an intermeshing of the fibers which causes the symbols to stick to the board.

By setting up various interlocking samples, complete with cars, trucks, pedestrians and bicyclists, it is possible to recreate all the situations involved in traffic accidents in daily traffic hazards.

This device has been developed by G. A. Flores, former Birmingham Chamber of Commerce president at his company headquarters in Detroit. The work done in collaboration with the leading safety experts from all sections of the United States.

Increase Retention Ability
 Since the majority of adults do not remember lecture content, the retention of the same material cannot be expected from children. However, the use of visual material has greatly increased the retention ability of both adults and children.

Answering the ever-present question, "Why use a visual story for children?" Sgt. Timm replies: "There are not many of us who can remember the lectures we hear unless we were extremely interested in the subject. We can, though, recreate scenes we have seen, pictures we have seen, and probably best of all, the movies we have seen.

"By using visual symbols to illustrate certain points, it is possible to leave a lasting impression on the subject about which you are speaking. The Video-Graph works like this with the children."

Flexible Method
 "Furthermore, it is one of the most flexible and economical methods I have ever seen of visualizing any traffic problem. The initial expense is low, it can be used anywhere and there are no complicated hook-ups necessary to operate it.

"If a child asks a particular question it can be illustrated. You can't do that with films."

The success of these school-age classes in reducing accidents has caused Police Chief Ralph W. Moxley to comment: "I only wish there were some way we could reach the pre-school age children. That, though, is a problem of the parents until the children are in school."
