A Final Briefing on Field Day Rules

Al Bates explains a few rules and regulations to some of the contestants entered in the Graefield Terraces Tots field day Saturday morning. About 45 youngsters took part in the event, cheered on by 150 parents and neighbors as they took part in their first event of its kind to be staged in Birmingham. Bates, a former Olympic candidate, has made a hobby of staging the events for neighborhood groups such as terrace residents.

Something new in the field day line—was introduced in Birmingham Saturday morning, in the competitive sports program staged for youngsters residing in the Graefield Terraces. The idea was presented by Al Bates, who has made a hobby of this sort of thing for several years.

Bates, who is associated with Bosquett and company, general agents for the Aetna Casualty and Surety company, is a former resident of Worcester, Mass., and was an Olympic candidate in 1938 at which time he was collegiate champion for the quarter-mile.

This year's event, similar to those conducted by Bates at Chatham Village in Pittsburg, was planned for May 30, but was postponed because of the surface condition of the yards. The 1950 event will be held on that date.

Get Acquainted

"I just like to see the youngsters have fun," Bates said. "It's also a swell chance for parents to get better acquainted."

The Birmingham "track" called out about 45 youngsters, who opened their day with a tricycle, bicycle and doll buggy parade, showing many original ideas in decorations and a brilliant flare of color.

The races, 20- and 30-yard dashes, potato races and relays, were determined by the weight of the contestants, and the "moral support" came from the sidelines with all the vigor of a full-time field event as these future track stars made their bid for early fame.

Permanent Trophy

Bobby Aldrich, at the end of the tournament trophy. Pen and pencil sets were presented to Robin Jay, Peter Soule and David Dahl, who tied for second place.

Grown-up Helpers

Adults who worked with Bates on the plans included Don Dahl, Kay and Tom Spencer, Kay and Allen Wenz, Judy Perkins, Barbara Miller, Craig Miller, May Adams, Jenny Perkins, Hank Canda, Bob Aldrick, Jack Hendrick, Jack LeVan, Bob Kettle, Don Adam and Bill Beebe.

After the shouting was all over the youngsters settled down to enjoy candy donated by Roy Ruebenstahl, regional sales manager for the A & P Tea company and dixie cups and more candy donated by Peabody brothers.

The permanent trophy, won by Bobby Aldrich, was donated by Frederic K. Graef, owner of the terraces, while the pen and pencil sets were the gift of the insurance company with which Bates is associated.

The public address system was handled by John Coyner, with Joe Wilson as official starter. Carl Rhodes was a popular field judge as he pinned the many ribbons to keep up with the growing list of winners.
