

Fruit En Roll

To make a wonderful dessert, roll out your favorite biscuit dough and spread it with a thick fruit sauce—rhubarb, strawberry, peach—or any of your favorite summer time fruits. Then roll it up into two-inch slices and bake. The clever dessert slices can be topped with more of the fruit sauce or fruit sauce—rhubarb, strawberry, with sweetened whipped cream.

Are there any "football widows" in the house? The plinking season with its assemblage of loyal-to-the-core students and fan-swinging, banner-brandishing alumni is almost upon us. And with its advent, there'll perhaps be many a girl sitting home missing the joys while the man in her life treks off to the slaughter to belittle himself. And all because the luncheon they don't fathom the theory of wing backs, sleepers and an oval shape, thing which gets tossed around something awful.

It's time for the woman to take her place upon the bleachers. This is a little easier to manipulate than in the sad state of the golf widow. The latter usually gets left lugging the golf bag if she attempts to keep up with her gent on the rolling greens. All a fall-season-widow needs to do bone up on a few preliminary pointers, dress warmly and fix her features in an expression of omniscience.

You see, to begin with, there are eleven men on each team. At a specific time they test things out onto the field looking all very vicious and bulky. They appear to be in a state of readiness and stuffed and wrapped up like a batch of grandmothers in their ruggish opponents who get nasty and try to knock them down as soon as a whistle blows. But back to the gist of the post which is best favored by the wind. This is a sneaky but customary trick as a wind blowing in the right direction can eke a pass a few inches farther than it could normally be thrown.
