Bits of Birmingham

Birmingham residents who waited hopefully for this month's meteor shower and then were greeted with a skyfall of clouds will get another chance to see an astronomical feature. According to Dr. Hazel M. Losh, assistant professor of astronomy at the University of Michigan, a total eclipse of the moon is due on Sept. 25 at 9:32 p.m. EST. By 10:54, Dr. Losh claims the moon will be completely blacked out and only a dull red or copper color disk will be visible. So don't turn in any flying saucer reports on that night, please.

A staff member of the Eccentric answered the phone last Friday to have a breathless young voice blurt out: "I've just finished reading the paper and it says school won't open until the eleventh. Is that true—really?" To the solemn answer that it was the truth the voice shouted "Oh! Goody!", bearing out once more that it is an ill wind which blows no good.

Birmingham makes the silver screen again. A camera crew went into action Wednesday afternoon in the vicinity of the First Methodist church and while a lovely blonde handled the station wagon, made films on how to properly park and leave the curb in an angle-parking area. Another session was said to be due over in the Lincoln-Southfield area, demonstrating the proper method of parking on hills. The whole thing is the work of an automotive concern deeply interested in motoring safety.

An item on the police blotter last week set this Wanderer wondering. The entry stated, tersely, "Accident not an accident." In-
