Positions Change in Birmingham Y Basketball League

Craig's sporting goods store quintet demonstrated that depth is a most important factor in winning a basketball game when they employed two fast breaking playboys to topple Exchange Club from the first rung in the YMCA league by a 56-28 score.

While all members of Craig's played in fanlike style, Fred's Barber Shop broke into the win column for the first time with a 29 to 14 triumph over Virginia Market. Paul Stephens gave points and offense to the Maroon and Grey five as they exhibited good ball handling with a nice blocking attack.

About Birmingham

- (1) We do not have race discrimination in Birmingham because the majority of the families are of the Caucasian race. (2) Class distinctions still are quite prevalent in the schools and most of the students belong to one clique or another.

Mrs. Sarah Brittain Mrs. Sarah Brittain, 85, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leo Stiers, 1053 Hazel, Sunday morning after a long illness.

Mrs. William Rich The body of Mrs. William Rich, a former resident of Birmingham is being brought to the Manley Bailey funeral home today.

Exchange was without the services of their star forwards Tom Macon and Andy Letford. However, they used Jack Simonds to good advantage by feeding the ball to him and letting him take set shots from out court.

Services were held Monday from the Bell funeral home, with burial in Kinseland Park cemetery. The Rev. A. E. Runkel of the First Methodist church officiated.

Caltrider's quietest loss their game through their inability to sink free throw shots from the foul line. They only dropped eight out of 20 attempts while North Chevrolet sank a total of 16 out of 27 tries.

With both sides employing zone defenses and a fast passing attack, they moved rapidly in the first half and found the score tied 13 at its close. Roge Reynolds sank 10 points for Caltrider's as his play dominated this period.
