Better Quality of Service to Be a Result of Single SOC Family Service Agency

The recent merger of the two family service agencies in Oakland County will have a significant effect on the quality of service given by the agencies, Robert H. MacRae, managing director of the Community Chest of Metropolitan Detroit, said yesterday.

"The advantages of having the Family Service of Oakland County as an office serving Oakland in the name of the two agencies, which formerly gave family counseling services here, are almost immediately apparent," MacRae said.

He pointed out that the new agency would be able to meet the standards set up by the Family Service Association of America and could pass the periodic examinations given by the national association which endeavors to raise standards of family agencies throughout the country.

The larger agency will attract better trained personnel and will be able to give its workers in-service training. It can also be a training ground for family case work students.

"Probably the most important advantage of the combined agencies is the ability of service that they will be able to offer the people of Oakland County," MacRae stated. "Psychiatric consultation will be available under the new ..."

Bloomfield Hills Architect Tells of Scandinavian Planning Systems

J. Robert F. Swanson, Bloomfield Hills architect who designed the proposed new school buildings for Birmingham, returned several weeks ago from a trip to the Scandinavian countries of Europe. The trip was made to study school architecture and get their slant on city planning.

"They have carried out a program of long-range planning for years," Swanson said. "They saw their school needs years ago and built with that in mind. Their buildings are beautiful and are beautifully done. The basic plans would be no great problem when they were faced with it."

Swanson mentioned several instances of buildings which have been of great benefit to them through the years. Their first and longest range planning had been done during a period when labor and material costs were low. This enabled them to save large sums because as expansion became necessary during later years.

Although Birmingham had done little in actual building during the past few years, Swanson said the long-range planning of the larger school system was showing its value now. He cited the completeness of the plans and the fact that the bond issue has been handled at lower interest rates than would have been possible otherwise.

Taking the load off your shoulders

You can stop worrying about your job of printing once you've placed the order with us. It is our philosophy, in doing business, that we give you what you expect and want. We consider your order a trust.

No matter how simple or how difficult a job is, it is our determination to have it effective for your use—and at our own expense it need be. We never stop and say: "That is all you are paying for."

Yes, we lose money on some orders but we gain friends and enduring customers. In the long run moral obligation pays greater dividends than the immediate dollar-gain.
