Peace cannot be something enforced by fear. That is an armed neutrality, not peace.
"What we need is a man with imagination to see past the obstacles of a single world government. A man so fired with this imagination that he can infuse them and bring about the greatest thing in the history of the world."

"THE FOURTH step is faith. We must have faith in God, in our fellowman and in ourselves. We must have faith in the future. We must have faith that we are coming from somewhere and going somewhere."

"Only the true realist can be educated to this kind of faith. The true realist will see education creating faith, because he knows what is about him."

"The atom bomb scares us because we let it. Strong nations scare us because we let them. We are not properly educated in faith."

"Education should be a lifelong habit, something constantly with us instead of the few years spent in formal education. We should never, never stop."

"Education, you see, is not to teach people what they do not know, but to teach them how to behave. Education, through music and books can give each man a dignity and nobility that will always be his own personal sanctuary. With dignity and nobility man can overcome anything—if he has faith."

"THE SPEAKER was introduced by Wylie E. Groves, treasurer of the board of education.
Robert Ervin, senior president, announced the gift from the class to be a directory for the halls of the new high school. The gift was accepted by Joseph Bachman, student congress president.

"Introducing the seniors who received their diplomas from Dr. Dwight B. Ireland, superintendent of schools, Ross A. Wagner announced the following scholastic awards:
Virginia Dare, valedictorian, a scholarship to Radcliffe college; Stewart L. Peck, two ATO scholarships to Johns Hopkins university; Robert M. Beals, Free Press award in debating; Delbert V.
