Local Youth Trains With Naval Fliers At Whiting Field

WHITING FIELD, Milton, Fla.—Naval Cadet James R. Hughes, USNR, recently completed the initial phase of his naval aviation training by making his first solo flight.

His flight, made in the Navy's Texan Trainer, is the first major step toward winning his wings. The flight was made at the USN auxiliary air station at Whiting Field.

Upon completion of his flight training Hughes will be commissioned an ensign in the USNR and will be designated as a naval aviator.

The son of Mrs. Grace Hughes, 511 Bates, Hughes attended Baldwin high school. He arrived at Whiting field on Aug. 26 and will complete the early phases of flight training in January.

BOY SCOUTS

TROOP B 4

Court of Recognition Monday honored those scouts who passed the Oct. 30 board of review. Those advanced included Jim Silbar, John Clark, David Crockett, Dick Silbar. The next board of review is slated for Nov. 27.

Two new patrols have been formed. Dick Lester and Bob Machus will head the Flaming Arrow with Gordon Provan and George Dennison in charge of the Black Bear.

On Nov. 18 members will assist at the Birmingham Lions annual party.

There were 22 members of the troop eligible for the weekend at Camp Howell.

A dozen scouts from the troop have volunteered to act as den chiefs for Cub Pack B-8. Stewart Schenck, Charles Godau, Richard Giles, David Parpie, Dick Sneed, Bill Ritten, Frank Phillips, Tim Usher, Frank Mabley, Jim Silbar and Dick Lamb. One more den chief is still needed.

TROOP B-1

Selfridge Field was visited by 22 troop members last week. The trip planned by Scoutmaster Bob Doyle who served with the Air Forces during World War II, was arranged through Col. James R. Gunn, commanding officer of the base.

Troop members inspected a C-47 and saw several P-80's. They were shown a movie film on how a bombing mission is planned.

HORSE SENSE AND NONSENSE

BY ALICE E. MORGAN

The chill winds are howling around our houses, pointing up each crack and crevice and making us think about storm windows, weather stripping and the putty we did not put around the windows last summer.

There's a big parade from attic or basement to the various windows around the house as screens hibernate and storm windows and doors strut their stuff.

Mother scrubs and brushes while dad stretches and cusses. The kids are all under foot, along with the family pet and everyone heaves a sigh of relief when the whole mess is over with.

Of course there are still the leaves to be raked and burned, the rose bushes to be taken care of and all the various bulbs to be stored in the proper places.

THE FAMILY scurries about finding suitable potatoes, carrots and the like for winter storage and laying in a supply of apples.

Dad checks the fuel supply and secretly wishes he'd remembered to have the furnace cleaned early last spring when the company called about it.

They are so busy now they can't promise service for another six or eight weeks. Well, he'll just have to start a fire going and hope for the best.

He must remember to take care of the car, too. A frozen radiator is no fun, nor is thick oil that wears the battery down to nil every morning.

Mother's equally busy trying to match up mittens, overshoes and youngsters. The ownership may shift from year to year, but whatever happens to the mittens?

MOTHER'S QUITE sure that when she put them away last spring there were pairs. She knows she bought them in pairs, but right now there seems to be a blue, brown and green affair that she never saw before. A couple of other misfits turn up too, but she feels that maybe she can persuade one of the gang to wear them around the yard.

She checks on winter coats getting back from storage in time for the first snow, which usually manages to pull a fasty on her and beat them by about a week. She shakes her head over the moth holes in the scarves and wonders if maybe the smell of moth balls wouldn't be better.

The kids shiver and shake while they wait for the school bus but their eyes light up when the snow flakes begin to fall. They will clamber aboard the bus plastered with snow from head to heal, wriggle like a basket of pups until they reach home, and then jump into the fray again.

THEY CAN STAND hours of it just so long as mother doesn't want something from the corner grocery. If she does it's so cold the kids just can't stand another minute of it. That is, of course, unless there's time to take in a movie on the way to the store.

The sleds, skis and skates come out of the attic and once more it is worth life and limb to try to walk across the porch without the benefit of a powerful spot light.

The lawn sprouts naked patches where the neighborhood gang has scraped up the last smidgin of snow to build a snowman or a fort.

Walking down the street is about the same as facing a howitzer squad. About the only difference is in the type of noise that shatters your ear drums. You don't say much, though, as long as the ammunition doesn't connect with a picture window.

THE STORES REMOVE the Halloween masks and candy from their windows and begin to come forth with subtle hints about the swiftly approaching Christmas season.

The kids begin to drop hints here and there as to what they would like to have and there's a flurry of letter writing to Santa Claus.

Dad heaves a sigh. He knows he must still go through with a tree-putting-up and tree-taking-down, but soon that will be gone. The family will settle into an easy routine of living with a great deal of pleasure and comfort.

He and mother sit and think of the long winter evenings with the kids and think that maybe humans aren't too bad after all. They stop envying the animals who simply crawl into a hole and go to sleep or the birds who fly south for the winter months.

They are satisfied with their life and let it's a great world. Who cares a hang about having to hole up for a few months? It's fun.
