Florence Dugger Takes Vows In Candlelight Ceremony

In a seven-thirty o'clock evening ceremony on October 28, Miss Florence Dugger appeared before the altar of Redeemer Lutheran church to become the bride of Clark J. King.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Dugger of Cole avenue are parents of the bride and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lura Whitehead of Jackson, Mich., and the late Mr. Charles King.

The Rev. Theodore Wuzgraz, Jr., read the candlelight ceremony before an altar backed by white chrysanthemums.

MRS. CLARK J. KING

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE by her father, Miss Dugger was veiled in white Chantilly lace over white tulle. Her princess style gown was cut with long sleeves, pointed over the hands, and her full skirt extended to ballerina length.

A white lace tulle headress held her finger-tip veil of illusion and she carried an arrangement of white shatterd and cluster chrysanthemums with trailing green ivy.

MISS BETTY JEAN MANN of Bloomfield Hills was the bride's maid of honor and only attendant. Her ballerina length frock was of toast colored Chantilly lace over matching tulle and her yellow chrysanthemum headress was repeated in a colonial bouquet of the yellow mist with trailing ivy.

Charles R. King of Ann Arbor was his brother's best man and Robert C. White of Wyandotte with Bud Dugger, brother of the bride from Birmingham, seated the guests.

AS SHE GREETED guests at the following reception in the church parlors, Mrs. Dugger was wearing a street length frock of beige crepe with brown accessories and yellow chrysanthemum corsage. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Whitehead, selected a dress of forest green velvet with matching tail, black accessories and pink carnation corsage.

The new Mrs. King donned a wine colored tailored suit with fancy accessories and white mourning the performances.

corsage before leaving for a wedding trip.

Following a short honeymoon, the couple have returned to make their home on South Woodward avenue in Pontiac, Mich.
