

Perhaps the individual life would be happier if, when good things come one's way, one would rejoice over them! Much of our unhappiness comes from lack of realizing that goodness must be fought and struggled for—it is not automatic in coming.

Birthdays, anniversaries, guests, births, parties are all news—call the society editor about them.

'Little Gallery' Exhibits Work of Michigan Artist

By BESS EDWARDS

Charles Culver, one of Michigan's foremost watercolorists, is showing works of an unusual new series at Peggy deSalle's "Little Gallery."

The paintings of the present exhibition form a group he has named the "Stone Series." They are interpretations arising from a study of stones found along the shores of Northern Michigan lakes.

In stones, with their patterns and imbedded fossils, he has discovered a new world not like our own. In it are beings, beasts birds and reptiles of species heretofore unknown and unclassified.

THE TREND of the series began in the spring of 1950 when, one day during a stroll, he found a small brown stone with a pattern on its surface which suggested to him a group of prehistoric animals.

His painting based on this stone—"Primitive Fish-like Creatures"—reproduced above was one of the first in the series.

The stone pictures present much more radical and expressionistic images than do most of his previous paintings (in which he tried creatively to interpret the landscapes, animals, insects, birds and flowers of our familiar world); yet the new paintings still essentially are, responses to the facets, fragments and views of nature he has contemplated with fascination—in the current case the microscopics to be seen in stones.

No definite plans for the wedding have been announced.
