Amendment to Building Code Approved by City

Provision in the building code pertaining to approval of the planning board of building plans were amended by the city commission Monday evening.

The code has provided that plans be referred to the city planning board "to pass upon the same with relation to the height, area, bulk, location and proposed use of such building, and to determine whether or not the same is in conformity with all or any part of a Master Plan for the physical development of the city of Birmingham, and whether or not the same is in conformity with the zoning plan, and with the zoning ordinance and other ordinances of the city."

The new amendment will substitute after the words "for study, and approval or disapproval" in place of the above quotation.

City officials feel this substitution may eliminate some of the bottlenecks and also eliminate inspection by the plan board of electric and plumbing code features, etc.
