WON FOR THE MONEY—Here's a scene of high (about a foot and a half) finance at the Fifth Air Force's 49th Fighter Bomber Wing airbase in Korea. Sitting behind the mountain of currency—$15 million in Korean Won—Col. Phillip A. Hlatt, left, of Richmond, Ind., and 1st Lt. Kenneth W. F. Fellman of Anniston, Ala., compute the pay of a crew of civilian laborers who work at the air base. The U. S. has always paid well, but before some of you taxpayers blow your top at what you think is overdoing a good thing, it may be wise to tell you that at the current exchange rate of 8000 to one, this stack totals only $2500 in American money.

FORGET SOMETHING?—A baby parakeet breaks out of its shell into what someone once called "a cold world," a logical description considering such a rude approach to it. This little "ugly duckling" of the parrot world—parakeets are close relatives of parrots—will, when fully grown, be slightly larger than a canary.

SANDMAN IS COMING—WITH FRIENDS—This could be taken for a winter scene except for one thing—that "snow" is sand that has been baking in a temperature hovering between 130 and 141 degrees. The soldiers, being tried for stamina under desert fighting conditions and, in turn, testing new equipment, were caught in this photograph by an Army photographer as they crawled on their stomachs over sand dunes in the Imperial Desert of California.

Ticklers By George

"Can you beat that! He knew we'd be back this year and still he didn't clean up the picnic ground!"
