News About GIRL SCOUTS

TROOP 38, ADAMS
The intermediates in this troop will meet at the home of their co-leader, Mrs. Jack S. Houghton, this year. At their recent meeting, they made Halloween pumpkins. Joan Scafori, a member of the troop, grew the pumpkins and furnished each scout with one. Judy Cowan brought the treat-poppers and cider.

On a field trip this Fall, they visited the Baldwin Library, the Scout office and then went on to Mulhollands to inspect the Girl Scout equipment.

The money-making projects being planned by this Troop for the year will buy each girl a jack-knife.

TROOP 52, PIERCE
Brownies of Troop 52 have made a large number of nut cups which were sent to the children at the Contagious Hospital for Halloween. Judith Beyer has been voted this troop's scribe.

TROOP 41, WING LAKE
At the meeting of this intermediate troop on October 25, the Scouts worked on their knapacks. On October 27 they visited Jack Miner's Aviary where they studied the birds and also heard a lecture about them. This newly formed troop is taking an active part in Girl Scouting, and the entire troop attended the Vesper Service at the Community House on October 28.

chantilly lace. The long satin sleeves came to points over the hands and were lace trimmed. A shirred bodice carried to a shoulder frill of lace.

Her double tiered fingertip veil was bordered with lace, and her cap was accented with clusters of orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and lilies of the valley.

Bonnie Mae Minnock came from Houston, Texas to be her sister's honor attendant. Her strapless gown was of autumn bronze satin with an over-skirt of net, and a satin bolero jacket. She wore a Juliet cap of matching satin and net, and carried baby mums in autumn shades.

Bridesmaids Sharrh Gray and Patricia Giethy wore matching dresses of autumn green. Pamela Kay Minnock, niece of the bride, and Jane Weiner, the groom's sister, wore flower girls in gowns of bittersweet taffeta with matching over-skirts. They carried spoon mums of pale yellow.

Richard Smith performed the duties of best man, and usher were Tom Tackabury, home from the Great Lakes Naval Hospital, Nicklas Hansen, and Walter Fowler.

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER wore a gown of grape shade beaded crepe, with camilla pink hat and gloves matching her camilla bouquet.

royal blue crepe, and an orchid corsage.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Another gathering was held later at the Bloomfield Hills home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey R. Hansen.

When the young couple left on a two week southern honeymoon, the bride wore a dress of purple velvet with matching hat and shoes. On her white traveling coat was an orchid corsage.

REALTORS Protect Your PROPERTY

Birmingham's Real Estate Board has for years been a closely woven, cooperative group whose primary aim has been to maintain the high character of the residential development in Birmingham and immediate environs. It has advocated always the maintenance of high subdivision restrictions; always strives to sell homes to people you would prefer as neighbors.

As a community service, this year Birmingham Realtors (Members of the Birmingham Real Estate Board) contributed substantial funds for Birmingham's school children's Halloween Fiesta.
