RESEARCH PAYS OFF

There's been a lot of talk about farmer-hunter relations in Michigan and there's going to be a lot more. In the heavily populated southern and southeastern parts of the state the hunting army is growing bigger every year. The main target is the pheasant and most of the good pheasant-hunting territory is privately owned by hard-working farmers who aren't too fond of trespassers. Hence the "relations" problem. The State is stepping in as peacemaker, putting itself in the farmer's place in a huge research project at Rose Lake near East Lansing.

More Wildlife Per Acre

If the farmer's interested — and many of them are — the Conservation Department can show him how to improve his property easily and most inexpensively so that it will support the maximum amount of game without affecting his crop production: At the Rose Lake Wildlife Experiment Station an intensive study of game populations and good game cover has been going on for several years. The Station is built around typical farm land. More than 600 acres is actually under cultivation, so this is a research problem that's entirely practical.

Application of Plan

Let's suppose you're an average Michigan farmer. Your farm includes some perfectly good acreage, a few gullies or drainage ditches here and there, fence rows, and maybe a woodlot or two. Any game on your farm must find protective cover in the weed growth along the ditches or fence rows, or in the woodlot. The Rose Lake Station can show you, with proof in practice, that the simple planting of rapidly growing multiflora rose along the fence rows will produce excellent habitat for pheasant and rabbits the year round. The multiflora hedge will beautify your farm, too.

Other types of bushy vegetation can be recommended for ditch edges and gullies. Such planting not only helps game but holds the soil together and halts erosion. The wooded section of the farm can be improved, too. A certain amount of cutting is essential—and with the proper treatment you'll not only have more abundant wildlife but the woodlot will give you more valuable timber, too.

Attitude Toward Hunters

With more game on your farm you'll be inclined to allow the well-behaved hunter to hunt over your property—and you can be mighty sure that, with the adequate cover you've helped nature provide, there's no danger of killing off all of your wildlife. Plenty of seed stock will always remain —another point that's been proven conclusively at the Rose Lake project where hunting is permitted under a so-many-guns-per-acre regulation.

If you farmers are interested in a plan to improve your farm to encourage more wildlife population, drop a line to the Game Division in our Conservation Department at Lansing. They're not selling anything. They're giving it away for the everlasting benefit of Michigan Outdoors!

Isle Royal Tour Nets Large Pike

Gene Hubbard's annual fishing trip to Isle Royal paid off this year with the biggest fish since the trips were started in 1937.

Every year, Hubbard, who lives at 109 Catalpa, takes 10 teenagers up to beautiful Isle Royal where they spend a full seven days on the water, fishing the harbors and streams of the famous vacation land.

This year's prize was a 42 inch, 23½ pound Northern Pike taken by John Boulton on Chickenbone Lake.

The party chartered a launch and lived on board throughout their stay at the Isle. They fished Duncan's Bay, McCargoe's Cove, Chippewa Harbor and rented canoes to try their luck on Lake Eva and Chickenbone.

Others in the party besides Hubbard and Boulton were Dick Waeschle, Dave Jokinen, Dave Roehm, Jack Graham, Bill King, Dick Hubbard, Maynard Scott and Roger Webster.

American Division Battle For First Holds Spotlight

The Indians and Red Sox in the American Division and the Braves in the National bracket lead their respective leagues into the final games of the Little League baseball season.

The Braves appear sure of their division title for the second half of the season and a one day playoff will decide the league championship for the last half of the schedule.

The Braves added two more victories the past week to take a secure hold on the first spot. They defeated the Pirates 2-0 with Harrie winning his seventh game against a single loss. Behind the pitching of Risdon they eked out a 4-3 decision over the Cubs later in the week.

Other National division results found the Giants taking a close one from the Pirates on a 7-2 score and the Cubs walloping the Giants 14-6 with Whaley winning in five innings.

American division leaders, the Indians, won from the Tigers by a 8-4 score with the win going to Hoover. The Red Sox outlasted the Yanks 10-7 behind the hurling of Muenchinger. The Tigers came back to defeat the Yanks 9-6 with Isbell the winning pitcher and the Red Sox decisioned the Indians 7-6 in a makeup game Friday after the two teams had battled to a 6-6 tie Thursday.

A Message

To Our Friends and Neighbors from DEAN COFFIN, Inc.

348 EAST MAPLE
BIRMINGHAM

Ann Arbor, September 30

Dearest Dad:

I'm real sorry I haven't written more often but gee, I've been so darned busy. Last night, for instance, a bunch of boys serenaded us girls at the dormitory. There was one boy there, the cutest thing, with a kind of stern way of talking and long brown eyelashes. Made me think of you. I was awful busy. I leaned out the window and shouted at him for a long time.

I've got to write a paper for my Home Economics course on the subject of frozen foods. You bought one of those freezer-and-food plans from Dean Coffin, Inc., so maybe you could write me the facts. Gee, Dad, you must be saving a terrible lot of money because Mother says you get such a big discount on your food now. And me being away this year, too! Write me the facts about the freezer and the food, Dad. And since you're saving hundreds of dollars on the food, could you send me ten dollars extra this month?

Love.
Susie.

October 5

Susie Darling:

Here are the facts about our freezer-and-food and the high cost of living: First, we miss you, and would much prefer to have you eating at our table each night.

Next, we bought a freezer from Dean Coffin, Inc. because they do arrange a large quantity discount for the food their freezer customers want to order. The savings on food actually are paying for our new freezer.

Third, the roasts and steaks are dee-licious, the best meat we've had since before the war. Also, our food is delivered right to our freezer. We have a small "Super-market" right in our basement. That keeps your Mother from needing the car for marketing every day.

It also keeps her from buying all those "extras" at the store 3 or 4 times a week. I save $5 a week just keeping her away from the temptations of modern merchandising. Honey, the Dean Coffin, Inc. plan is a quality proposition, set up by some local Birmingham families who are raising kids and know what good food costs. It's a revolution in food buying, and nothing less.

Enclosed is ten bucks, which is part of what we save each month by having a Dean Coffin, Inc. freezer-and-food-plan. If you want more facts, I'll get them. Meanwhile, don't lean out the dormitory windows so far. You might catch a flying saucer right on your lovely little schnozz.

Love
Dad.

P.S. They sell Ben-Hur (chest type) and Sub-Zero (upright) freezers.

Happy Freezing.

See TIDE magazine, May 9:

"The home freezer-frozen foods sales tie-up is particularly logical. It offers housewives a way to combat high food costs. Housewives can look forward to a new way of life via such plans: less shopping, fewer bundles, easier work, lower prices, more convenience."
