Ireland Explains Lunch Incident At High School

In reporting on an alleged "demonstration" Tuesday, Dec. 9, against food prepared in the cafeteria of the Birmingham high school, Superintendent Dwight B. Ireland told board of education members that "this was not a strike as I know the meaning of the word."

He said that business at the lunchrooms fell off sharply but that school officials had noticed student opposition to the food in the past.

Investigation of the lack of patronage at the cafeteria proves to me that rumor and misunderstanding prompted the behavior of some students who did not realize how serious a situation they caused at the time," Ireland said.

NORMAN A. Wolfe, assistant superintendent, met with members of the student congress who apologized for the actions of the student body after the incident. Wolfe told the congress that he tried to serve the food the students wanted and keep those dishes that didn't sell out at the cafeteria.

Congress members agreed to meet with Wolfe again to determine what the students would like to see served. Wolfe makes out the lunchroom's meals. Board Member Mrs. Lewis B. Sappington asked Ireland why the schools did not employ a dietitian. Ireland answered that it was a question of additional cost and questioned whether the schools would have enough value out of a dietitian's services.

It still remains that students will eat only those foods that they like," Ireland continued.

IRELAND reported that many of the students wanted sandwich trucks and Coke dispensers in the school.

"They found these services in the Royal Oak high school and now they want them in our school," he said.

Ireland stated, "The press made a mountain out of something that was not worthy of such publicity. I believe in our children, and I don't think that they did anything intentionally bad."

Board member William Spence said that some study should be given to the lunch problem so that parents would know what is being done for the students and not be swayed by idle rumors.

Board member Richard A. Sauerbrun asked that the menus be checked to see if any of the students' allegations were true and to correct whatever was found necessary. He asked that a report be submitted to the board on the study.

Approve Addition Plans For Torry

Final plans for the 12 classroom addition to Torry school were approved by the Birmingham Board of Education Tuesday night, subject to whatever minor changes the school administration should deem necessary.

Robert Swanson of Swanson Associates, architects for the school building, explained the revised plans and said that a great deal of study between school officials and the architects had gone into the final set of plans.

Prefacing Swanson's presentation, Superintendent Dwight B. Ireland told the board that the building situation was critical.

"We now have every classroom filled," Ireland related, "and 70 percent of all our classrooms are in excess of 30 students per teacher."

"IF WE DO NOT have any additional classrooms open by next September the schools will really be in a pinch," Ireland continued.

"We are studying the half-day school session question and the advisability of placing more students in each available classroom, but we haven't arrived at an answer yet."

Jaycees Advance Deadline on Home Lighting Contest

Because of the number of entries already received and the many requests for a time extension, Birmingham Jaycees have set Dec. 30 as the closing date for the 1952 Home Lighting Contest.

Entries blanks must be received at McBride hardware, Woodward avenue, or the Chamber of Commerce office, East Maple, by noon Saturday to be eligible.

George Ely, publicity chairman, said entries this year are not broken into special divisions based on the type of home. Rather, the city has been divided into five sections, corresponding closely with the election precincts. Each area will be judged separately, with prizes for each.

Judging will be based on originality, design and how Ely is adapted to the home and the use and balance of color.

IT'S NOT necessary to have a huge Santa Claus sliding down the chimney," Ely said, "but if that suits your home, use it! We want to impress it upon everyone that the most entries we have, the better we will like it."

"To be sure that no one is missed out in the judging, we will make more than one trip through an area if necessary. We've picked what we consider a very capable group of judges and we know that there will be prizes enough to make it interesting for the winners."

Prizes will be in the form of certificates, redeemable in Birmingham and Federal Authority, to make it possible for the winner to receive something which he wanted and would like.

Proper Operation Seen Necessary For City's Dump

Birmingham City Manager Donald Egbert has directed to prepare a plan for the orderly disposal of debris at the city's Walker gravel yard. His task will include the preparation of regulations for the dumping of refuse to establish proper control of disposal.

In his report to city commissioners, Egbert said that even though Birmingham had approved the articles of incorporation for the Southeastern Oakland County Garbage and Rubbish Authority, a site still would be needed for items which would not go through the regular process after its establishment, probably in 1954.

PROPER OPERATION of a disposal plant would be a dig into trenches into which rubbish would be dumped to an established depth. Upon filling one trench, a second would be prepared, the excavated earth being used for an adequate cover for the first.

This, Egbert pointed out, would permit the future use of the dump for recreational or other purposes which would not require basements or deep-seated foundations. He suggested that members of the commission be kept advised in order that they will be informed concerning the problem.

Answering Commissioner Lance Minor concerning the use of the city dump by outsiders, Egbert said the site was kept open one week as an experiment.

Of the 54 persons who visited the dump, 17 were from Birmingham, 17 from outside, and 12 others were unclassified, Egbert said.

Besides the 12 classrooms, the addition will contain a multi-purpose room, activities room (now scheduled for art classes), kitchen, library and conference room.

Six Lectures Planned By School Board

A series of six lectures by staff members of the University of Michigan on "Problems of the New Administration" was authorized by the Board of Education Tuesday night. The lectures will cost the school district $200, part of which will be returned to the schools.

Proposed plans call for Thursday lectures at 8 p.m. Dates for the meetings will be announced later.

Direct Dialing Between Royal Oak And Big Beaver

BIG BEAVER, Dec. 16—Beginning at 12:01 a.m. next Saturday, Dec. 20, local telephone subscribers will dial calls to "Lincoln" numbers in Royal Oak without the assistance of a telephone operator.

The Michigan Bell Telephone Co. announced this change in connection with the expanded dialing privileges for "Lincoln" and "Jordan" telephone users who will dial directly to Big Beaver, among other exchanges.

W. B. Fauser, manager here for Michigan Bell, said, "Now we can do it," recalling a promise which the company made when dial service was inaugurated here.

HE WENT ON to explain that the company has long recognized the need to speed calls between Big Beaver and Royal Oak. Mechanical difficulties prevented direct dialing until a new "translating" system was developed by Bell Laboratories.

The new equipment 'ironed out' differences between the two dialing centers, between earlier and more recent installations," he said.

YMCA In Second Win Of Season

The Birmingham YMCA Dark Green marked up its second win of the season with a 62 to 24 conquest over the Downtown YMCA of Detroit. Coach Cecil Nickels' boys were out in front early in the first quarter and rolled to a 24 to 11 half time lead.

Bob Folm, Gerry Pike and Earl Mudge broke repeatedly for lay-up shots and managed to score at will as the team entered the fourth quarter.

Birmingham 'Y' dominated play throughout and Bob Folm lead both teams in scoring with a total of 26 points.

The boys from the Downtown 'Y' were affiliated with the Dear 4 and Dumb school and were playing under the banner of the Detroit institution, Birmingham's next game is against Hannan YMCA on the Detroit's floor Thursday night, December 18.

This is the last scheduled game until January 8 as all teams will recess for the Christmas holidays.
