Brandon-Linden Future Is Tabled

City commissioners Monday night decided to table indefinitely the vacating of Brandon between Shirley and Linden and instructed City Manager Donald C. Egbert to drop any paving plans for the south end of Linden.

Commissioner Ralph A. Main's attempt to have the question of street vacation referred to the plan board was stilled by Commissioner V. B. Watkins who stated that the plan board was being bogged down by small matters such as this which prevent them from carrying on any constructive planning program.

THE PLAN BOARD stated this exact sentiment at its May meeting when they found that the regular monthly meetings were repeatedly taken up with referrals from the city commission.

More Study Asked By Commissioners On Library Work

The city commission Monday night instructed City Manager Donald C. Egbert and City Attorney Forbes Hazzard to report their findings on the $2,346 request of the library board before the commission takes further action on the matter.

The library board met with the commission to discuss necessary repairs and improvements in the library building that the board is unable to carry out because of budget limitations.

The city will also review the possibility of taking over the maintenance duties of the building to ease the financial pinch the library finds itself in.

MEMBERS OF the board told commissioners that there will be a $15,000 shortage in money used only for operation of the library in the coming year and needed improvements would have to be forgotten unless the city could help in expenses.

Commissioners decided to hold off on the construction of a second stairway to the basement and electrifying the present book lift because of the excessive cost to the city at this time.

They did agree that the $2,346 figure to improve lighting in the main reading room, the stack room and catalog room and complete other building repairs appears necessary and asked the attorney for a report on the city's right to give more than the one-third limit to the library.

EGBERT WAS ASKED to study the requests of the library further and report on his findings. The board sees a future need for a second stairway to the basement and conversion to an electrically operated lift to handle getting books to the basement.

"To meet the growing demands of Birmingham's increasing population we must add more reading room for residents," Library Head Jeanne Lloyd said.

Miss Lloyd plans that the bindery room in the rear of the main reading room be cleared and used for additional reading space.

THE BINDERY would be moved to the basement where room is available. This room, she pointed out, is at the opposite end of the building from the present stairway and would prove a hardship for employees who would be called on to make many trips a day to the basement.

"BIRMINGHAM CHAIRS" and suspended walls combine to lend a smart restaurant look to the new Birmingham high school's cafeteria, affectionately called the Maple Room by the student body. Chairs and tables are stacked and the juke box turned on for school dances. (Eccentric Staff Photo)
