LION CLUB MEMBERS BRAD SPRINGER and Mark Beers seem to enjoy their task of distributing ice cream to sun struck families, or maybe they are thinking of the good that can be done with the proceeds from the Lions' ice cream sale. Members sold half-gallons of the "cool stuff" door to door throughout Birmingham last week Wednesday afternoon. Helping out with the truck work was Mike Springer. (Eccentric Staff Photo)

Clear Intersections Of Shrub Hazards

Four intersections reported obstructed by shrubbery have been cleared by the city forestry department, a survey this week showed.

The intersections were Lincoln at Pierce, Lincoln at Southfield, Lincoln at Shirley, and Maple at Shirley.

City Planning Board Postpones Zone Action

The city planning board is waiting until the city hires a new planning technician before reviewing or revising the zoning ordinances.

According to Harry M. Denyes Jr., chairman of the planning board, the staff is handicapped by lack of adequate staff members and nothing will be done until July, when the new technician is expected.

News copy submitted early necessarily is given preference over late items. So the "Early Bird" usually gets the space.

AMATEUR HOME WIRING

With the high cost of labor and materials these days, there is a greater tendency for people to do their own maintenance work around the home.

One of the problems that should be handled with due respect is temporary or extension electric wiring. In almost every home extension cords are used in one place or another. Some in the basement are hung on nails, draped over pipes or just plain hanging, socket to outlet. On the upper floors they are usually run underneath rugs or through partitions.

All types of material have a tendency to wear and wiring is no exception. When under a rug they are constantly walked on, then when least expected wear through and are liable to short circuit and cause a disastrous fire. When over nails they wear through from chafing and then short circuit, even though fused with 15 amp fuses. Again you are liable to have a fire. The same situation exists on the piping and when run through partitions

IF EXTENSION cords must be used, use a type approved by "Underwriters Laboratories." It doesn't pay to use a cheap cloth covered or thin rubber covered wiring. If it is more or less of a permanent outlet, have a qualified electrician put in an approved outlet. Never drape extension cords over nails or pipes, staple the cord with insulated staples. Make as neat and safe an installation as possible.

Remember, you wouldn't drive a car without first learning all about it, so unless you know all about electrical work, let someone that is qualified do it. It may save your life.
