Sculptor Turns Painter in Little Gallery New Show

If the drawings of Jacques Lipchitz hadn't been borrowed by Peggy de Salle for a show in her Little Gallery, they would be nothing but a mass of charred ruin now, destroyed in the fire which recently consumed his studio.

The drawings, renderings for Lipchitz's sculpture, and block prints which will continue through May 24, Conrad Westphal make up the Little Gallery's current show which will continue through May 24.

Lipchitz's drawings show the same powerful forcefulness that distinguishes his sculpture in bronze.

Conrad Westphal is an established artist in Europe. However, this marks the first time his work has been shown in the United States.

His treatment of classic subject matter in a two-dimensional manner testifies to his long residence in Greece and his close association with Picasso.

News About GIRL SCOUTS

Fifty troops had exhibits at the Fourth Annual Girl Scout Fair held at the Community House last Saturday afternoon. The tables prepared by Brownie and Intermediate Girl Scouts included items that included peasant blouses and skirts the girls had made for themselves.

A display was prepared by Troop 336 of Holy Name School. The Scouts had prepared a miniature tent, a camp stove, a lantern with a tiny pot of peas cooking over a log fire.

There was a small washed table and lashed tripod for a wash basin, and clothsheets with a line of clothing in it. The camp site was surrounded by plant-life picked by the Scouts the morning of the Fair. Even included was a tiny lake.

Also reproduced on a small scale were the various types of camp fires, including the hunter's fire, the trench fire, the tepee fire, the tin-can fire, reflector fire and ceremonial fire. Behind this table was a large poster covered with snapshots taken while Troop 336 was on various camping trips.

ANOTHER TABLE that attracted many guests was the one exhibited by Troop 326 of Pierce School. The Scouts had made Girl Scout Dolls from pipe stem cleaners and had them engaged in the highlights of their year's activities.

The tiny dolls were enjoying a taffy pull, a skating party, a cook-out and a band practice. Included in the instruments was a grand piano made from a cardboard box. This troop also prepared musical scrapbooks.

In charge of the entertainment program was Troop 304 from Barnum School. This Troop is working on its Curved Bar and also had an exhibit which displayed posters showing how they are made.

has attended many meetings of other troops to teach the Flag Ceremony and the proper way to care for and display the flag. They have also been teaching the requirements for the Tenderfoot Badge. The Flag Ceremony at the Girl Scout Fair was performed by Troop 304. During the year they have been presenting the colors at Scout city-wide events.

TROOP 308—ADAMS SCHOOL
Brownies of Troop 308 met at Terry School, and at their last meeting they were taught the Flag Ceremony and proper care and display of the Flag by Isabel McDonald and Linda Marcan, members of Troop 304 at Barnum School. The Brownies also received their World Friendship Pins at this meeting. Treats were served by Becky Parr.

TROOP 302—BARNUM SCHOOL
Last Monday evening, the Girl Scouts of Troop 302 entertained the Senior Activity Group that meets twice a month at the Community House. The girls did a half-hour skit in the form of a radio program that described the activities of Scouts. This Troop had a table at the Girl Scout Fair that showed various phases of radio work they have studied.

TROOP 343—PIERCE SCHOOL
Scribe Bonny Taylor reports that this troop is making plans for a cook-out this week. Included in the articles they displayed at the Girl Scout Fair were waste-baskets made from potato chip cans and covered with wallpaper.

TROOP 345—QUARTON SCHOOL
Newly elected officers for this troop are: Joanna Loreke, President, Mary Alice Williams, Treasurer, and Nancy Proctor, Scribe. This troop displayed at the Fair the various items they have made to earn their badges.

TROOP 352—PIERCE SCHOOL
During Easter vacation, the Brownies of Troop 352 visited Greenfield Village and had an unexpected surprise when they realized they had chosen the date of Queen Juliana of Holland's birthday. They were able to see the Queen at a very close distance.

The Brownies were accompanied by Mesdames Paul Thompson, Walter, Beyer, John Pletsch and Edward Schliskey. Following their tour of the Village, the Brownies enjoyed noshing lunches.

TROOP 364—PIERCE SCHOOL
The Brownies of Troop 364 met recently at the home of their leader, Mrs. Henry H. Jones and saw a collection of seashells, coral and plant-life which had been gathered by Mrs. Jones and her daughter, Pam, at Pompano Beach, Florida. For the craft lesson of the week, the girls made seashell brooches. Mrs. Robert Knotts and Mrs. Richard Lee assisted with the program. Refreshments were served.

ONCE UPON A TIME
there was a sleeping beauty . . . a beauty sleeping . . . a sleeping beautiful . . . oh well, a very beautiful creature indeed. She was well aware of this but alas, she did not realize that those looks were a result of sound, restful, relaxing sleep. Such sleep comes only from a bed whose mattress and boxspring give smooth, even support with firmness to suit the individual.

The years passed and sleeping beauty in her twenties, no longer was a beauty or a sleeper either. Her sublime looks had fallen prey to a fitful, tossing, wearying battle to get to sleep on that time and use worn bed.

Her mother, wise to this disappearance of beauty had her daughter's mattress and boxspring repaired like new in one day by the Oxford Mattress Co. Lo and behold, the not so sleeping and not so beautiful became again her look-catching self.

Moral, if there be one, let us help nature in its effort to keep you the way you wish to be.
