Bits of Birmingham

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Martin, 1328 East Maple, were so impressed by the workings of the city fire department at an appliance fire in their home recently that they took the time to call The Eccentric to comment on it. Mrs. Martin found that, unlike stories she had heard about fire-fighting, Birmingham's crew was quick to respond and considerate in its search for the cause of the billowing smoke coming through the hot air registers. She was especially thankful of their noiseless trek through the bedroom of the Martin's six-year-old daughter who was saved the fear of fire. The trouble was found in a burned-out condenser in the television set which was removed without damage to the home.

A number of weeks ago Rollie Reese, former Birmingham school board member and veteran on the city's annual Halloween party steering committee, sold his well-established grocery business. Asked by this Wanderer how he was enjoying his "retirement," Rollie promptly replied, "Why, I'm not retired—just tired."

Hizzoner, Mayor Dean Beier, who made the presentation at the Annual Breakfast of the Ruth Shain International Relations Class, said he had received a very mild invitation to the affair and since he had never before attended an Annual Breakfast, he was flattered when he entered the room and saw such a large gathering. He said he didn't know there were so many women in Birmingham who got up so early in the morning. Now, Now, Mr. Mayor!

The doll collection of Mrs. Kenneth Swartwood, AAUW president, was exhibited to fine advantage last week when the dolls were used as table decorations at the Ruth Shain Annual Breakfast. Representing many countries, the dolls were dressed in native costume, and along with the bright and colorful travel posters, lent quite an international atmosphere to the event.

RELAX... Enjoy It!
