Rising car prices have had lots of attention and comment, and that's only natural. People of this country have a keen interest in automobiles . . . a new car is a sizeable investment under any circumstances . . . and car prices certainly have risen.

Combine this with big jumps in your personal taxes and living expenses generally, and it's easy to see how the keeper of the family budget can shake his or her head and wonder whether money's worth can justify the money price in a new car.

As car manufacturers, Chrysler Corporation is proud to say that the price of a new car never in your life got such good value as it can get right now . . . especially if you get a Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto or Chrysler.

Proof of this comes from two directions. First . . . when you compare car prices with other prices in your life, you find they've risen less than almost anything you buy.

But the second point's the exciting one . . . when you compare today's car itself with the car of a few years ago you find mechanical value up many times more than price.

Most things you pay more for today are the same things you paid less for yesterday . . . (butter's still butter; meat's still meat). But not your car. The postwar rise in car prices covers greater car building progress and gains in value than have perhaps ever been made in so few years before.

For the best examples of this, we invite you to call on a dealer in the cars we make, and let him demonstrate to you what has happened. Especially if it's two or three years since you tried out a new car, you'll almost think you're in another world.

The first thing you'll discover is really exciting and satisfying new ideas of style and design. Outward lines that invite you to come closer are matched by interior appointment and comfort with which you can live with real pleasure for years to come. But even this is only the start.

You'll find exciting new engines in these cars along with new and safer brakes, new easier-driving transmissions, new shock absorbers that just about make rough roads disappear!

Two of these engines are based on the most revolutionary new design development in over 25 years. In two of our cars you'll find the entirely new handling ease and safety of power steering. In two you'll find the new experience of power brakes. In any of them you'll find seats of wonderful ease, and doors you don't have to squeeze to get through. In any of our cars owners tell us that driving ease and response to the controls are not equaled by any other makes of car.

In fact, if you're willing, here's an offer we'd like you to take up right now . . . Forget money worries for a little while, and just for the fun of new discoveries in motoring value, drop in on a dealer in our cars for a demonstration. Just let yourself feel how the car behind the price tag has climbed the thrilling hill of American progress in building better cars.

We promise you a wonderful time when you do. We are also happy to assure you that the businessmen who deal in our cars are selected with great care. Whether it is trade-in value of your present car, or finance terms on the purchase of a new one, or dependable service to the car once you have bought it, you will find these good men to do business with.
