

Low Script Is Best Seller Among St. Dunstan's Cast

F. Hugh Herbert's "For Love or Money" script is currently being read for members of St. Dunstan's Guild of Cranbrook who will be center stage when the curtain rises November 21-22, and November 28-29.

"For Love or Money" is a first act play, and "The Moon Is Blue," both by F. Hugh Herbert, are being produced by the Guild. The play is directed by Sheldon Nobel and the play is being produced by John H. Warner are conducting rehearsals at the Cranbrook villa on Leno Pine road.

PRODUCTION DETAILS are being ironed out by Mrs. John Under, production manager. Organizing the sets designed by Mrs. Guy Base and Mrs. Richard Himmelfarb is Thomas Martin and committee.

Cynthia Booth is holding lines for the play. Mrs. E. M. Bedford and Mrs. Frederick Booth will supply the properties, with Mrs. Anthony Randall and Mrs. Wesley Wright furnishing the costumes.

Charles Gieg is handling the lights and Thomas Snelham is his opposite number on sound effects. Dwight Enright is in charge of photography.

Mrs. Carl Meyer and her committee are again handling ticket sales at Grinnell's Record Counter and at the door.

FRIDAY EVENING St. Dunstan's Playhouse was the scene of a colorful "Hunters Ball." The pavilion was transformed into an autumn forest complete to being stocked with stuffed animals by Hubert V. Davis and his committee.

A short organization meeting was followed by skits by Mrs. Dean Coffin. Dancing and refreshments ended the evening.

Choosing a Baby Sitter Is an Important Decision

BY EDNA MILES

MODERN mothers often feel they are called upon to make an unfair choice. Since today's young families often live far away from older-generation relatives and home-town friends, wives either have to stick at home with no evenings out, or else they have to call in outsiders whenever they decide to arrange a break in routine. When it's the latter, it's sometimes with fear that they turn over their offspring to a sitter.

This apprehension on the part of parents can be lessened if they will observe a few precautions. Avoid spur-of-the-moment calls for sitters. It's best to investigate carefully and judiciously the person with whom you're considering leaving your baby.

As a general rule, the too elderly and the too immature are to be avoided. Such practices as entertaining friends or making lengthy phone calls are taboo, and should be pointed out as such. Mothers should leave definite instructions concerning the child's routine. And put out, within convenient reach, any special toys that will help keep the child happy and entertained.

And last of all, prepare for emergencies. Leave with the sitter the telephone number and address of your destination, and also the numbers of nearest police and fire departments. (In case you can't be reached), your doctor, and the fire and police departments.

Parents of this happy, secure-feeling little girl, left, can enjoy an evening out with confidence, knowing she is in the hands of a responsible sitter. Tragedy may result, however, from leaving child, right, with immature girl, who chatters at length upon telephone, unaware that her charge is playing with household poisons from the cleaner cupboard.
