News About GIRL SCOUTS

TROOP 306—BARNUM SCHOOL
The first fall meeting of Troop 306 was held in the newly decorated Scout Room in the Community House last week. The Girl Scouts made their plans for the coming year and included many field trips as well as work for the Needlework Guild.

Officers elected include: president, Carol Terry; vice-president, Martha Cox; secretary, Patricia Kannel; treasurer, Joan Fox; and scribe, Barbara Dodd.

Elected as representatives to the newly formed planning board for coordination of junior high school activities were Judy Hardin and Linda Mickelson. Three senior high school girls, Cheryl Mickelson, Nancy Kannel and Lynn Buckner, will work with the troop and especially try to develop a music program. They will go on overnights to lend a hand.

Barbara Dodd and Sue Gorton recently made arrangements for a bike ride for this troop. They met at the home of their leader, Mrs. Vernon Mickelson, last Saturday. The hike ended at the home of Carol Terry whose mother served a spaghetti dinner.

TROOP 330—BARNUM SCHOOL
Mrs. Robert Reinhardt and Mrs. William Zabrzicki, leaders of Troop 330, report that the group has started its fall activities and that there are sixteen girls on the troop's waiting list.

A field trip to the Highland Recreation Area was the first get-together of these Girl Scouts, and many plans were made for this year. The Girl Scouts have become interested in civic affairs and are anxious to familiarize themselves with our government. They recently went to the City Hall where they helped Miss Hanley, the City Clerk, fold absentee ballots. A grand total of 1200 ballots were prepared by the Girl Scouts.

Plans for an overnight at Detroit's Camp Holly have been made. The Scouts will leave on Thursday, October 9, and return on Friday, October 10.

"THE THINGS THOSE SALESMEN SAY"
A Play Written For Wage Earners

TIME: An evening, early this summer
PLACE: A screened-in porch

AT THE RISE OF THE CURTAIN, THE WAGE EARNER IS SCROUNGED ON THE PORCH GLIDER, READING A MAGAZINE. HIS LITTLE BRIDE ENTERS. HE: (LAUGHS UPROARIOUSLY)

SHE: Well, darling... a good story?
HE: Yup. Pip. Collier's. Called "The Kelpie". Make a good TV show. That reminds me (RISING) I think I'll watch that.

SHE: Now just a minute, Hub. You don't have to rush out of the room just as I come in.

HE: Listen, honey, there's a good show on TV and—
SHE: I don't care if it's a ringside view of the elopement of Betty Hutton. I want five minutes of your time.

HE: What for? (HE SITS ALL RIGHT)
SHE: Freezers. I want a home freezer. A big one.

HE: Are you feeling all right?
SHE: I want to buy food in large quantities and get a discount. I want to put up lima beans and peas and corn when they come in. I can save 40% on our cost on those vegetables.

I want all that food in my home so I don't have to trot to market every other day. I can save money on gasoline alone. HE: You've been reading those Dean Coffin, Inc. ads, honey. He's just a peddler like the rest of us.

SHE: Well, he's a peddler with a good idea, I know that. HE: We can't afford to spend one penny more than we're now spending. What time's DRAGNET?

SHE: Never mind about dragnet.
HE: Dragnet! DRAGNET!—Been telling you about it for weeks.

SHE: Now this salesman from Dean Coffin, Inc. showed me that all we do is take the money we now spend for perishable foods and use that to get started on the plan. In fact, we use less money than we now spend for meats, fruits, vegetables, butter, and ice cream.

HE: Less money? Ha! You don't hear too good. That's the trouble with you gals. You get talking with a salesman and—
SHE: I heard him. We take about seventy-five of the hundred dollars we normally spend for this food. That's our down payment. They deliver the freezer and a four to six month supply of food. And it's wonderful food. I know because Grace Evans has the same plan and she's crazy about it.

HE: She's crazy, period. Now let me get this straight—you say that for seventy-five dollars, you stop going to market every day or so... you quit beating my ears about having the car to shop with... and we get steak for the price of hamburger. That right?

SHE: You bet. Say, you seem to know a lot about this plan. HE: I'm smart. I catch on quick. Married you, didn't I?
SHE: Flattery will get you nowhere. Now this man from Dean Coffin Inc. said the monthly payments would be $45... for the food and the freezer. We're spending a hundred dollars a month right now for this same food. This way I'd have a small supermarket in my home, ten steps away from the stove.

HE: What's the gimmick?
SHE: Gimmick? What do you mean, dear?
HE: That catch! This gismo. The hooker. That salesman ain't no Santa Claus.

SHE: Why do you always act so stubborn?
HE: Honey, listen—they don't GIVE those Dean Coffin freezers away, you know. And we can't afford to spend a nickel more for anything.

SHE: Now look here, they've got the food prices down so low for people who buy these freezers that the savings on food PAY for the freezer. Honest... dear.

HE: I'd like to talk to that peddler. He certainly sold you a bill of—
SHE: Good! He'll be here any minute now.

HE: What—Tonight? What about my TV show?
SHE: What about the high cost of living?
SOUND: THE DOOR BELL RINGS.

HE: Oh, nuts!

THE CURTAIN LOWERS TO SUGGEST THE PASSING OF A HALF HOUR.

SALESMAN: so just to summarize, Mr. Wage Earner... the down payment you make is twenty dollars less than what you now spend for these same food items... the freezer arrives in your home... and every month thereafter the monthly payment is still less than what you normally spend for this same food.

HE: Yeah, yeah. I see all that. But what about re-orders on this food? That's the catch.

SALESMAN: Our agreement with our food source specifically provides for your being able to reorder at the quantity discount prices as long as that company is in business... and believe me, sir, the way people are going for this plan, they won't go out of business for a good many years.

HE: I see. And you say you will teach my wife how to buy other food for our freezer and how to prepare it and cook it?
SHE: You take care of the money and I'll run my side of the house.

HE: Now, when are these Freezer Forums?
S'MAN: At the Community House in November, Sir!

SHE: Say, how come you know so much about the Dean Coffin Home Freezer Forums?
S'MAN: When your husband was in our store last week I—
SHE: In the store? You mean—you knew all about this Food Plan?

HE: Why, sure honey. We've been spending money for food like sailors for beer. It's time to get smart, buy in quantity and take that discount.

SHE: You mean—you—
HE: I called up Dean Coffin and told him to send a man out here to get you sold first. I'm no dummy.

SHE: Oh, darling. Such an understanding man. (SHE KISSES HIM) Such a smart man.
HE: Nuts.

SALESMAN: Ah... ahem... excuse me, ah—a woman will be out tomorrow to take your food order, ma'am. And the freezer will be installed Saturday.

Cordially,
