Troop B-1 Scouts Planning Weekend On Lonely Island

Explorers and Patrol leaders of Troop B-1, Boy Scouts, will visit Big St. Martin's Island over the July 4 weekend.
The group will leave Birmingham on Friday, to spend two days on the 700 Acre tract in the Maskmac Straits, returning home on Monday. Camp activities will be in charge of Eugene Kempf, Jr.
The island, deserted since lumbering operations were discontinued there years ago, was visited by the troop in 1930, the first group to completely cover the island in more than 25 years.
They plan to have a complete motion picture record of the current trip, with a planned schedule of color and black and white still photography.
Robert Doyle, Troop B-1 leader, says, "The trip will be rough. We take in our own food, prepare our own meals and living accommodations, even to purifying our own drinking water."
"The trip was planned as a reward for the Explorers and leaders who have worked so hard on troop schedules during the past year."

NO BONES... light in weight... wonderfully comfortable to live in... yet most wearers find it holds in abdomen just as effectively as any rigid, heavily boned girdle does... To wonder its popularity grows greater
